WARD RESTS CASE; OFFERS NO WITNESS; FAMILY SECRET SAFE

Fate of Peters's Slayer Expected to Be in the Hands of Jury Tomorrow.

DEFENSE PLEADINGS BEGIN

Mills Charges Improper Coaching and Bulldozing of State's Witnesses.

ENACTS DRAMATIC SCENE

Ward and Wife Told to Stand Before Jurors—Challenge to Attorney General.

Counsel for Walter S. Ward, on trial at White Plains for the killing of Clarence M. Peters, rested his case abruptly yesterday, without calling Ward or any other witness to the stand. The only answer to the State's case was a four-hour summation by Isaac N. Mills, former Justice, chief of the defense.

The attorney branded the prosecution as unfair and declared that not a shred of new evidence had been adduced against Ward. He asked the jury to return a verdict of acquittal and, taking up the evidence point by point, sought to show the flimsiness of it.

The final words of the lawyer, punctuated by the timed tolling of a church bell, found Ward smiling and his wife weeping.

Summation by Attorney General Carl Sherman, two hours of accusation phrased against a death-sentence background, and the charge to the jury by Supreme Court Justice Robert F. Wagner lie between Ward and the foreman's words that will acquit or convict him. These legal forms will hold the issue from the jurors until about noon tomorrow.

The voice of Judge Mills, quavering as he besought the jurors' consideration, and rising stridently as he alleged State coaching of witnesses, rose and fell, hummed and beat against the stillness of the courtroom all through the session. Forty years on the bench and at the bar were fused in that four hours' of oratory, and at the end he sprang his climax of appeal.

Down through his summation he maintained a vigor of declamation, of gesture and of intensity that belied his years. But as late afternoon came, dimming the panelled windows, emotion and weariness pulled at his flagging fire. His voice broked and lagged, his shoulders sloped and he leaned more often against the table before the jury box.

Leads to Dramatic Scene.

"Just a few words more." The lawyer's speech was so low he seemed to speak to himself. In through the half-raised windows drifted a single note of a stronger voice, a solemn stroke of the church bell across the street. Judge Mills, with bowed head, seemed not to hear it as he thoughtfully stared down at the counsel table.

All others heard it, however. The elderly attorney, slightly deaf, traveled on—precedent upon precedent, law upon law, decision against decision. Again the bell sounded. The tiring tones and the pleading words dropped on and on. All listened—to the bell. It tolled a third time. Then, with shorter pause, again.

Maybe Judge Mills caught the last stroke faintly. Perhaps his task was ended. Spreading out his hands in a wide, sweeping gesture, he turned slowly and gazed intently at Ward and at Ward's wife, seated just back of him.

"Mr. Ward," he said, "will you stand up? And you, Mrs. Ward?"

The jurors, fatigued by the long speech and by the stuffy air of a crowded court, were resting back in their chairs. They leaned forward. A murmur ran along the benches back of the railing.

Ward arose. Gray-suited, blond hair smooth, face flushed, broad-shouldered, lean, six feet in height, 32 years old. Apparently half his height, the lines of her fur-trimmed blue dress accentuating the high school lines of her slender figure, Mrs. Ward was at his side. No rings, beyond a wedding band, on the thin hands working at the handkerchief. Both faced squarely toward the jury.

"Look at them," commanded Judge Mills, "look at them. Does any man among you believe that you are looking at a cold-blooded murderer? Do you note the broad shoulders, the steady eye? I judge a man by his wife and his friends. I wanted to have their two children here today. I wanted you to see them. By a strange freak the boy looks like his mother and the girl looks like the father.

Ward Comforts His Wife.

"I wanted them here—" he motioned to Ward and his wife to be seated, "but their father refused my request. He said that he did not want his children brought into this atmosphere. He did not want his children to see their father in a steel cage or to be exposed to the stare of the multitude."

Ward's face was white. Mrs. Ward, whose eyes were dry through all the sinister allusions of the day's session, shuddered and wept when Judge Mills spoke of her young son and daughter. Ward turned to her and put his hand on her lowered head. There were tears in his eyes. It was the first positive emotion he had displayed at the trial.

Stirred by the surprising strategy of the prosecution in abruptly ending its case late Tuesday, the regular trial habitues were augmented yesterday by disappointed hundreds. A long line of automobiles was parked at the curb of the block-long granite court building an hour before the session was to start, and by 9:30 o'clock the court attendants had locked the courtroom against further spectators. The curious ones were lined three deep

Priest Fears Consequences If Dry Law Is Not Changed

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—Dire consequences will result unless the Volstead act is changed, the Rev. Francis C. Young, assistant pastor of St. Raphael's German Catholic Church, author of verses, entitled "The March to Victory" and "Our Nation's Prayer," declared in a statement today. It was at his church that the funeral of George ("Spot") Bucher, who was shot and killed with George Meeghan Sept. 17 by unidentified assailants, supposedly in a war between rival beer runners, was held.

"The Volstead act is a law. It is, however, one of the biggest farces in our country, and must be changed," said the assistant pastor. "The general disregard for the Volstead law is the cause of much of the present disrespect for all law.

"There is no doubt in my mind that the majority of the people want the Volstead law changed. This can be done. Let those who represent you understand that it must be modified if they care for your support in the future."

CROMWELL CHARGES TOLD TO GRAND JURY

Stock Exchange Head Understood to Have Testified Regarding Threats by Legislators.

OTHERS WILL BE HEARD

Banton Seeks Further Evidence of Alleged Attempt to Intercede for Bucketeers.

Seymour L. Cromwell, President of the New York Stock Exchange, testified for an hour and a half yesterday before the Additional September Grand Jury regarding allegations he made last Monday in a speech at the convention of the American Bankers Association in Atlantic City that certain legislators and others had made threats of legislative reprisals against the Exchange if its rules were not violated in favor of bucket shops.

Mr. Cromwell appeared in the office of District Attorney Banton at 10:45 A. M. in response to a Grand Jury subpoena issued the the evening before at the instigation of District Attorney Joab H. Banton. He was accompanied by George Gordon Battle, his lawyer. Mr. Banton was in conference with some of his assistants when they arrived and Mr. Cromwell and Mr. Battle were ushered into the office of Chief Assistant District Attorney Ferdinand Pecora.

Mr. Banton entered the room a few seconds later, however, and informed Mr. Cromwell that he had assigned Mr. Pecora to take up the matter of the charges. The prosecutor then left the room. Mr. Pecora explained to the head of the Exchange that it is the practice of the District Attorney to have all witnesses in a Grand Jury proceeding examined by one of his assistants with a view to eliminating non-essential questions and expediting inquiries.

He asked Mr. Cromwell if he would consent to make a statement to him about the charges, but the Exchange head replied that he preferred to make his statement before the Grand Jury as soon as possible. He incidentally remarked that he had some affidavits with him which he desired to lay before the body. Mr. Pecora told him that they would prove of no service in a Grand Jury proceeding as evidence to be laid before the body had to be given on the witness stand under oath.

Goes Before Grand Jury.

Mr. Pecora then left the room and within three minutes returned and informed Mr. Cromwell that the Additional September Grand Jury had consented to take up the investigation of his charges immediately. Mr. Pecora then led Mr. Cromwell to the Grand Jury chamber, and Mr. Battle waited in the anteroom.

It was understood that during his examination before the Grand Jury by the Chief Assistant District Attorney Mr. Cromwell mentioned the names of at least three legislators who had threatened him or the Exchange with adverse legislation if the tickers of certain suspected bucket shops were not restored immediately to service. He also was reported to have told the Grand Jurors that another legislator who had introduced a bill "to put the Exchange out of business," had demanded a retaining fee from him of the Board of Governors of the Stock Exchange, "so that he might testify that he had investigated the Exchange and found it perfectly all right."

It also was reported that Mr. Cromwell told of another incident in which

COOLIDGE PUTS WORK BEFORE CEREMONIES IN HONORING HARDING

Invited to Memorial Service Here, He Asks Delegation to Decide for Him.

THEY DECIDE ON DUTY FIRST

CONTEST FOR CONVENTION

Three Cities Seek It, and Coolidge Leaves Choice to the Republican Committee.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—When a delegation of New Yorkers today invited President Coolidge to attend a memorial service for President Harding in New York on Nov. 2, Mr. Harding's birthday, the President asked its members to decide for him whether he would not best honor the memory of Mr. Harding by remaining in Washington and utilizing his time and endeavor to lay before Congress attempted solution of pending questions in the light of Harding policies, than to lose the time that would be required in preparing an adequate memorial address and making the trip to New York.

The members of the delegation told President Coolidge they felt obligated as Americans and as friends of Mr. Harding to say that in view of the tremendous importance to America and the world of a correct solution of the problems the President was facing, and in view of the inestimable value of his time for administrative purposes, it would be more in the interest of the American people that he should remain in Washington and honor his predecessor by endeavoring to crystallize his policies into constructive legislation.

What happened in the President's office when the New York delegation called has a deeper significance than appears on the surface. President Coolidge is attempting to adhere consistently to a decision to devote himself to public affairs without any material diversion. His purpose in taking this course is to make it clear that if he is to be a candidate for the Republican nomination for President he will stand on a record of personal accomplishment and devotion to the policies of President Harding. The new President is working hard, and there are indications that he feels the strain of his office, with the multiplicity of detail in connection with administrative affairs that he desires to master at the outset of his tenure.

A lesser purpose which actuated President Coolidge in his attitude toward the invitation of the New York delegation is his desire to avoid delivering any public addresses away from Washington until after he has communicated his views on important questions to Congress when it assembles in December. Once the ice is broken by his annual message to the Senate and the House the President will feel free to consider invitations to make speeches on matters of interest and concern to the country.

The New York delegation was headed by John A. Stewart, who explained to the President that it represented a committee formed originally to welcome President Harding on his expected arrival in New York from his extensive tour across the continent to Alaska and back by way of the Panama Canal, Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands. After Mr. Harding's death the committee was reorganized as a memorial committee.

President Coolidge was told that the committee was arranging to hold the memorial services in the largest available hall, that Bishop William F. Anderson of Cincinnati, a close friend of President Harding, would offer prayer, and that a Baptist clergyman would deliver the benediction. Mayor Hylan, the delegation said, was the honorary head of the Memorial Committee.

"No invitation which could be extended to me would have a stronger appeal than that which comes from your committee asking me to be the speaker at the Harding memorial service in New York," said President Coolidge to the delegation. "It brings our great loss to us with particular poignancy that those who had planned to welcome President Harding on his arrival in New York should now be preparing to pay honor to his memory."

In conversing with the delegation President Coolidge said that if he were

Washington Democrat Wins First Election For Congress Held Under Coolidge

SPOKANE, Wash., Sept. 26.—Election of Judge Sam B. Hill, Democrat, of Waterville, as Representative in Congress from the Fifth Washington District over State Senator Charles E. Myers of Davenport in yesterday's special election seemed indicated on the face of returns compiled by The Spokane Chronicle today.

With returns received from all except seventy-eight precincts, Judge Hill had a lead of 518 votes.

Senator Myers in a statement said: "I guess I'm licked."

Political observers expressed the belief that the missing precincts could not change the result, as their vote would be small.

The returns gave Judge Hill 18,068 votes and Senator Myers 17,550.

Myers ascribed his apparent defeat to the fact that "the producers are more or less desperate and no doubt balloted for what they thought would benefit them."

The vote over the entire district was light, in spite of the pleas of leaders of both parties for a heavy turnout, fewer than 42 per cent. of the registered voters appearing at the polls.

Yesterday's special election was the first for a member of Congress since President Coolidge took office, and national issues were emphasized in the contest. Myers based his candidacy on the Administration record of President Harding and his promised support of the policies of President Coolidge.

Judge Hill declared his advocacy of a special session of Congress and a Government-fixed price of $1.75 for wheat, and cited his adherence to Democratic principles.

Both candidates received the endorsement of national political leaders in their campaigns.

In the 1920 election the Republicans carried the district by a majority of 10,928. In the election of 1922 the Republican majority was 2,172.

STRIKE DELEGATES FOR BERRY'S TERMS

Would Accept International Cards and New Contract Terms and Give Guarantees.

CARRY TERMS TO STRIKERS

Meeting in Beethoven Hall Postpones Final Action on Acceptance Till Friday.

Foremen and assistant foremen of New York newspaper pressrooms who were among the participants in the unauthorized strike against the newspapers called by New York Web Pressmen's Union No. 25 held a meeting at Beethoven Hall, 210 Fifth Street, yesterday and discussed how they could return to their old places and arrange for the return of the other pressmen who struck on Sept. 17. It was decided to send a committee to see George L. Berry, President of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union.

The foremen called on Mr. Berry at the Waldorf last night, after promising to make a report on the result of their mission to a mass meeting of pressmen later in the evening at Beethoven Hall.

Cards and Contract Agreed To.

The committee, which made it known that it represented not only the foremen but the pressmen and the juniors also, agreed to take to the Beethoven Hall meeting a document prepared jointly by them and by Mr. Berry calling for the acceptance by the New York web pressmen of the following points:

1. The local pressmen shall take out cards of membership in the international union.
2. The local pressmen shall accept the present contract arranged between the Board of Directors of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union and the New York Newspaper Publishers' Association, agreeing also to give guarantees for the faithful performance of the contract.

A preamble to the document states that acts of sabotage or destruction of property shall be regarded as barring those having committed such acts from a restoration to their positions. It is understood that when the local pressmen take out international union cards they become members-at-large. No reference was made in the document to the formation of another local union.

"I am completely satisfied with the way things are going," said Mr. Berry last night after the committee departed for Beethoven Hall.

Papers Back in Old Dress.

Owing to further improved conditions in the pressrooms of New York newspapers, it was decided yesterday by the publishers that the newspapers should today omit the composite headings which have been displayed since the beginning of the illegal strike of members of New York Web Pressmen's Union 25 and appear in their usual dress.

Additional pressmen from other cities continued to report at the offices of the international union, Rooms 614 to 618, 150 Nassau Street, yesterday in response to the call of President Berry to out-of-town locals for support in his fight against the dissolved New York local. Some New York pressmen also applied for international union cards.

At Beethoven Hall, the spokesman for the foremen's committee presented the proposal to the pressmen and moved that it be accepted. An amendment to postpone a vote until Friday at 8 P. M. was submitted. Discussion followed. At midnight, pressmen who began leaving the hall reported that the amendment had been adopted and that the proposal would be printed and placed in the pressmen's hands today.

Paper Handlers Say "No Strike."

Mr. Berry made the following statement in reference to the paper handlers' situation:

"The following telegram was forwarded to Thomas P. Gill, President of the New York Paper Handlers' Union No. 1:

"New York, Sept. 26, 1923.

"Thomas Gill, 23d Floor, Sun Building, 150 Nassau Street, New York City.

"Under date Sept. 23 I caused to have delivered to you a letter through Alex. Hayes. This letter required an answer. You will please give me before 5 o'clock today, Wednesday, Sept. 26, a definite assurance and answer of compliance in every respect with the letter in question which was served upon you as President, and upon Mr. George Travers as Secretary of Paper Handlers' Union No. 1. If this answer is not given and compliance with the letter is not fulfilled by you and your officers in every respect I shall recommend summary action be taken by the International Board of Directors. "GEORGE L. BERRY."

"New York Paper Handlers' Union "No. 1,
"150 Nassau Street, New York,
"Sept. 26, 1923.

"Dear Sir: I am informing you that in accordance with the instructions contained in your letter of Sept. 22, 1923, the men are all back in their respective positions.

"Also that there has been no strike of our members.

"Sincerely,
"THOMAS P. GILL, President.
"GEORGE F. TRAVERS, Secretary Treasurer."

All newspapers received a good supply of paper yesterday. Up to 4 P. M. the United States Trucking Company had unloaded eighty loads or approximately 560 tons at the newspaper plants.

Motorcycle Patrolmen James McGovern and Lloyd Curry were injured early yesterday morning when their machines skidded as they were escorting newspaper trucks. Both were attended by surgeons and went home. Motorcycle Patrolman Melvin Williams was pursuing a delivery truck which had been stolen, when his machine skidded and his left shoulder was bruised, but he remained on duty. The stolen truck was found a block away from the accident.

WALTON'S SOLDIERS FORCE LEGISLATURE TO GIVE UP SESSION

Members Are Evicted From Capitol in Five-Minute Bloodless War of Words.

STOPPED AT CHAMBER DOOR

DEPART SAYING THEY "MET"

Will Base Court Fight on Record of Meeting—Governor Extends Martial Law.

STATE HOUSE, OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 26 (Associated Press). — Oklahoma's "rebel" legislators were dispersed by the military at noon today, when they attempted to convene a special session of the lower house to seek the impeachment of Governor J. C. Walton.

Tonight the House leaders declared the session had been formally convened in the few minutes before the dispersal and is now in recess pending the call of the presiding officer. They had recorded what happened in a "House Journal" which will be made the basis of legal action, probably in the seeking of injunctions against the Governor and guard officers tomorrow.

Governor Walton announced tonight that rigid martial law will be invoked in another county, not named, in response to a request for "military protection" by a delegation headed by the Mayor of one of its cities.

There was no violence or bloodshed when the legislators forced the military and in five minutes settled the question of who now controls the capitol.

The call for the session was formally filed with the Secretary of State five minutes before noon. It then bore sixty-five signatures.

Colonel R. A. Sneed, Secretary of State, declared he would file the document in the archives of the State, where it will be a part of the State history—"the most glorious public document in the history of Oklahoma, a new Magna Charta of American liberties, and a rededication of the State to the principles of constitutional government."

Then the House members gathered before the entrance to the House chamber were given a firm and curt order by Colonel W. S. Key, military commander of the city, not to attempt to assemble.

Tries to Open Sessions.

With the atmosphere charged to a fever pitch, Charles S. Brice, speaker pro tem. of the House, attempted to call the House members to order.

House members and newspaper men were grouped as closely as possible to the entrance of the chamber, when Brice, from the back of the crowd and across the open court that pierces the rotunda, suddenly made his effort to open the session. There was a shuffle as members sought to gain places of vantage. The sharp command of the guard commander to "stand where you are" arrested the movement.

Brice had barely raised his hand and said, "Gentlemen of the House—," when Colonel Key, stepping up, broke in and in a loud voice called on every one in the crowd to remain motionless.

He then read the following order prohibiting the session:

"Pursuant to special executive military order issued by Governor J. C. Walton of Oklahoma and Commander-in-Chief of Militia Forces of said State, addressed to the Adjutant General, forbidding the gathering or assembly in a pretended session of any or members of the Oklahoma Legislature at the State House in Oklahoma City at 12 o'clock noon of Sept. 26, 1923, or at any time or place within the State during the present period of unrest, it becomes my duty, by direction of the Adjutant General, to enforce the provisions of the Governor's order; now therefore, I, William S. Key, as military commander of the district of Oklahoma County, forbid this attempted meeting and direct that you disperse immediately."

Bloodless Battle Over in Five Minutes.

Women and girls who had fringed the crowd about the house entrance were caught in the midst of the floor as the members faced about and all stood silently while the order was read.

When Colonel Key had completed his reading, D. A. Stovall of Hugo, representative from Choctaw County, asked the military commander if he "had the full force of the State National Guard behind the order." Colonel Key made no reply.

W. E. Disney, representative from Muskogee, then asked if the gathering was being dispersed "as a Legislature or as individuals."

"You are being dispersed as a Legislature," Colonel Key responded.

A moment of suspense followed. The crowd seemed taken aback at the suddenness of the action and the change in demeanor of the armed guardsmen posted around the rotunda.

The situation took on a threatening aspect. There was determination written on the face of Colonel Key, as he issued his command to the legislators to disperse at once. He spoke in a harsh voice that left no doubt as to his determination to carry out the orders of his superiors.

There was, however, no indication of resistance. Armed officers moving through the crowd barked out orders to "Leave the building!" and without another word the House members began to depart from the rotunda. At 12:05 P. M., five minutes after their clash with the military, all of the legislators had left the corridor and the military were alone in command of the building.

About 200 persons witnessed the scene. The House members left the Capitol almost in a body for their caucus headquarters at a downtown hotel.

The doors of the House chamber never were opened and throughout the entire

GRAVE CRISIS NOW AT HAND IN GERMANY; MARTIAL LAW REPORTED IN WHOLE NATION AS KAHR IS MADE DICTATOR AT MUNICH

Rhineland Is Seething With Separatist Activity; Berlin and Cologne Admit Situation Is Grave

BERLIN, Sept. 28 (Associated Press).—Not the least of the German Government's worries at present come from the alarming reports from the Rhineland, where the separists are showing increasing activities. They now have created a "general directorate" which has convoked a grand rally to be held at Dusseldorf next Sunday for the purpose of proclaiming a Rhineland public.

The French régime is said here to have agreed to place seventy railroad trains at the disposal of the separists, who believe the situation created by the German Government's abandonment of passive resistance offers a suitable moment for the accomplishment of their designs. The secessionists have organized a special police force, which is to be clothed in green uniforms, similar to those worn by the Prussian "green police."

The German press in the Rhineland admits the gravity of the situation arising from the secession sentiment and declares this will materially complicate the impending negotiations with France. It gives warning that the strength of the movement must not be underestimated.

COLOGNE, Sept. 26.—"Give no quarter to the secessionist traitors," is the command given by the labor leaders in the Rhineland to their following, who are urged to bend all efforts toward the maintenance of national unity.

The opinion of the German press in the Rhineland area supports the Berlin's Government's action in calling off passive resistance, but warning is given against possible advantage being taken of the situation by the separist elements.

German quarters represent popular hatred of the separatist as fast crystallizing into extreme indignation. "If we hate a Frenchman because of the torture we have been forced to endure," said a German political leader, "we despise a separatist ten times more. However," he added, "whenever we run into a secessionist we scent a Frenchman."

PARIS, Sept. 26.—Corfu will be evacuated by the Italians tomorrow and turned back to the Greek Government. Italy, however, will receive the 50,000,000 lire ($2,160,000) deposited by Greece in the Swiss National Bank as forfeit money from which any indemnity set by the Allies should be paid. This decision was announced by the conference of Ambassadors tonight as a result of this morning's meeting, the reason given for the forfeit by Greece being that the report of the allied investigators indicated the Athens Government had not done its best to find the murderers of the Italian delegation on the Greco-Albanian Boundary Commission.

At yesterday's meeting the British Ambassador refused to vote to give to Italy the 50,000,000 lire and suggested that the issue should be left for a later decision. The Italian Ambassador flatly rejected this proposal, stating that, in view of the fact that the assassins had not been arrested, Italy would not evacuate Corfu unless the forfeit was paid.

The British spokesman then asked his Government for new instructions, today's vote being the result. After the vote had been taken, Baron Avezzano, the Italian Ambassador, announced that the evacuation of Corfu would be completed tomorrow as promised.

The action of the conference of Ambassadors is regarded as the final settlement of the crisis growing out of the murder of the Italian mission. Italy reserves the right to ask the World Court to rule on her claim for payment of the costs of the occupation, but it is prob-

Communists Declare Soviet and Execute Mayor of Berkovitza—Fight With Russian Rifles.

SOFIA, Sept. 26 (Associated Press).—The decisive battle in the Communist uprising is being fought in the City of Ferdinandovo and the village of Berkovitza, which are four miles apart and half way from Sofia to the Danube. This was the substance of a statement issued today by the War Office.

Five thousand Communist and Agrarian allies are besieged there, after having proclaimed a Soviet republic and established complete control over the area.

Four thousand soldiers, aided by civilian volunteers, have been carrying out an enveloping operation during the last five days, and have now drawn their lines completely around Ferdinandovo and Berkovitza.

"Bulgaria will fight to the last ounce of her strength not only her own battle but the world's struggle against communism," said Premier Zankoff today in an interview with the Associated Press correspondent.

"The Third International," he said, "plans to extend Sovietism to the other Balkan States and then to sweep westward. In spite of our weakness we are determined to win the struggle or die in the attempt."

Premier Zankoff then told the correspondent that the allied Governments, through the Commission of Military Control created by the Treaty of Neuilly, had authorized the Bulgarian Government to increase the military forces in the country to such strength as was deemed necessary to cope with the trouble in the interior.

Prisoners taken by the Bulgarian troops carry improved rifles of Russian design, while the tactics employed by the rebel officers strongly recall the methods used in the original Bolshevist revolution in Russia. Men armed only with clubs and batons are placed in the van of well-equipped troops, which open

Strong Opposition to Kemal Is Rising With Trade Lagging and Finances Strained

BERLIN, Sept. 26. — Members of the Turkish colony in Germany who are friendly to the new Nationalist Government in Turkey are much exercised over the reports now reaching Central Europe of discord among Mustapha Kemal and many of his leading associates.

Until the Lausanne Treaty was agreed upon the Turkish Nationalists held their differences under cover, and presented a solid front to the Entente. But the moment they had won what they regarded as a great diplomatic triumph over the powers and insured the withdrawal of European armies from Constantinople, the dissension among Mustapha Kemal's chiefs came out into the open.

The resignation of Raouf Bey from the Premiership and his open opposition to Mustapha Kemal and Ismet Pasha provoked much comment in Central Europe and England. Raouf is a naval officer. He received much of his education abroad, partly in Germany, and speaks all the Continental languages as well as English. He made a trip throughout Turkey recently, after his resignation, and provoked a great storm of criticism from the ardent Kemalists by visiting their opponents in all the important cities.

The rumblings reaching Central Europe indicate that discontent with Mustapha Kemal's handling of affairs is gaining ground. Mustapha and his associates were so sweeping in their introduction of western ideas and ideals that they shocked reactionary Mohammedans into silence for a time, but there now is evidence that the pace they set has been too fast for many of the old-timers, who are becoming vocal and aligning themselves with the anti-Kemalist factions.

Turkey's dispute with Russia over commercial relations, which practically cut off all communications with Russia for some time, has been greatly criticised by many Turks. The financial situation is so strained that reconstruction work is difficult and Mustapha's enemies are charging his policy with the failure of Turkey to regain its trade.

With the disappearance of foreign trading houses from Constantinople under the Kemalist regulations and restrictions, the business situation becomes gloomier every day, and Mustapha Kemal is a far less popular man as a director of reconstruction than he was as a leader of Turkish soldiery against the Greeks.

President Ebert delegates executive power to War Minister Gessler, who becomes the military ruler of Germany.

Freedom of the press and assembly is abolished.

This action has been taken in consequence of advices from Munich that former Premier von Kahr has been appointed General Commissioner for Bavaria with full powers.

The Government has placed Saxon and Thuringian troops along the Bavarian border.

So long as Bavaria does not take military action the Government will try to solve the problem of this dictatorship within the Republic diplomatically. KAHR HAS COMPLETE POWER.

But Bavarian Movement Is Declared Not to Be Anti-Berlin.

MUNICH, Sept. 26 (Associated Press).—Dr. von Kahr, former Premier, was tonight appointed General Commissioner for Bavaria, with full power to proclaim an exceptional State and adopt any other military or police measures to protect Munich against insurrection from reactionary or radical sources.

The appointment follows upon the activities of the Hitler Guards or other so-called patriotic leagues, who are mobilizing for a general review on Friday.

This official action is viewed as a purely local precautionary measure and is in no wise aimed at the central Government.

The rumor that an exceptional state has been proclaimed is officially denied, although it is announced that von Kahr has full authority to take such a step if the situation in Bavaria demands it.

The radical shop Soviets intend to hold a congress of all the Bavarian units.

BERLIN, Sept. 26 (Associated Press).—Dr. von Kahr, former Bavarian Premier, has been appointed General Commissioner of State for Bavaria. He is empowered to proclaim martial law, if necessary, but it is denied officially that martial law has been proclaimed as yet.

Adolph Hitler, Bavarian Nationalist leader, has issued an appeal, according to a dispatch from Munich, summoning his followers to resign from other military organizations and join the ranks of the "storm battalions of the National Socialist German Workman's Party."

Another Nationalist leader, Prince von Wrede, has summoned all the Bavarian and German horsemen to form "a storm cavalry corps."

Rioting occurred yesterday outside the Town Hall at Zittau, Saxony, according to dispatches received today. The crowd stoned the police, who opened fire, killing two and wounding fourteen.

BERLIN, Sept. 26.—Bavaria tonight proclaimed itself a dictatorship. Gustav Von Kahr brushed Field Marshall Von Ludendorff, Herr Hittler, Premier Von Knilling and other candidates aside and became the first Dictator in Bavaria.

The Constitution has been suspended.

Owing to the majority of inhabitants favoring a monarchy and dictatorship the revolution was accomplished in orderly fashion without bloodshed. Herr Von Kahr assumed the dictatorship and issued a proclamation, saying:

"In these serious hours I have taken over the office of General Commissioner for the nation, for my warm love of Bavaria, of the nation and of the Pan-German Fatherland."

The proclamation concludes by callir upon every one of pure German extraction to support him, and he declares the strongest measures will be taken against "all enemies of the National Fatherland."

Among the laws definitely announced suspended are all those guaranteeing freedom of speech, press, assembly, telephone, telegram, secrecy of mail, secrecy and sanctity of person, dwelling and property. Habeas corpus is declared non-existant.

Herr Von Kahr is vested with powers to call troops and use troops, arrest any one he chooses, keep prisoners without trial and seize the property of any one he declares an enemy of the nation.

In the ferment following the surrender on passive resistance the Council of Bavarians met and listened to Premier von Knilling explain his stand during his trip to Berlin. Premier von Knilling was immediately discredited as Bavaria's spokesman. A dictatorship was favored in an exciting scene, and when Herr von Kahr's name was proposed he was unanimously made dictator.

The Ministerial Council asserted that it had acted under Paragraph 48 of the German Constitution, which provides for extraordinary powers in serious times. Martial law had not been declared at midnight, but it is expected. The German Constitution has been declared set aside as far as Bavaria is concerned.

Herr Hitler issued the following order:

"Party members: Since I have taken over the political leadership of the fighting forces, I order every party comrade of all military organizations not belonging to our fighting forces to immediately join the storm troops, either the Reichsflagge or the Oberland divisions of our national Socialist German Workers' Party. Whoever fails to join the storm troops in ten days will be forced out of the party."

In Berlin today numerous organizations of former officers met and pledged support to a military action to overthrow the present coalition. One meeting was broken up and nineteen officers arrested last night. Prince Karl today issued a proclamation to the Order of German Knights asking that every one place his auto at the disposal of the Nationalist war elements, adding:

"Whoever wants a united pan-German Fatherland must help save the country from Marxism and Bolshevism, and therefore the knights, uhlans and chevaliers and other German knights, must join up with the storm troops."

At a meeting of the "Bismarck Boys" organization of the Nationalist Party, it was declared that the giving up of the passive resistance would be accepted quietly, but the hour was awaited for active resistance. National conscription was urged.

Adolph Hitler, commanding the grayshirted Bavarian Fascisti, demands civil war in Germany. Munich today is filled with posters calling fourteen mass meetings equivalent to a mobilization of the monarchist elements. If not war, then at least a little bloodshed is planned to indicate the Bavarian dissatisfaction with the national Government's capitulation to France which was announced in a formal proclamation today.

Knilling Opposed Ruhr Surrender.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MUNICH, Sept. 26.—Herr von Knilling returned from the Berlin Conference of State Premiers this morning. During the day he received representatives of the press and outlined the results of the discussion.

He declared he was alone in the demand that the withdrawal of passive resistance should not be a subject of negotiations with the invaders and it must remain solely for the Reich to decide. He also stood alone in the demand that Germany should declare that the Versailles Treaty was broken and that therefore all payments should cease until the sovereignty of the Reich over the occupied territory was restored. Knilling spoke for the Bavarian Government. Hitler has been elected political leader of the fighting section of the Fatherland Association.

EBERT PROCLAIMS RUHR SURRENDER

Necessary to Preserve the Life of the People and the State, President Says.

BERLIN, Sept. 26 (Associated Press).—President Ebert and Chancellor Stresemann announced in a formal proclamation today that the German Government had been compelled through bitter necessity to end the Ruhr battle. Adherence to passive resistance, said the document, would have brought on the economic collapse of Germany and consequently would have threatened the livelihood of the German people. The text of the proclamation follows:

"On Jan. 11 French and Belgian troops occupied the German Ruhr territory against right and treaties. Since then the Ruhr and Rhineland have endured most grievous oppression. Over 130,000 Germans, men, women, old men and children, have been driven away from their homes. For millions of Germans the idea of individual liberty no longer exists.

"The occupation was accompanied by numberless acts of violence. Over 100 of our countrymen lost their lives; hundreds of others are still languishing in prison. Sentiments of justice and patriotism were stirred by the illegality of the invasion. The population refused to work under foreign bayonets. The whole German people is grateful for that fidelity to the German Reich and steadfastness that stood the test of the hardest times.

"The Government of the Reich undertook to watch over its distressed compatriots so far as it was able. There was thus an ever-increasing drain upon the resources of the Reich. The funds in aid of the Ruhr and Rhineland last week reached the sum of 3,500,000,000,000,000 marks, and an expenditure of at least double that amount was foreseen for the present week.

"The former production of the Ruhr and the Rhineland ceased and the economic life in occupied and unoccupied Germany became disorganized. It is most seriously to be feared that should the same line of action as hitherto be proceeded with, the creation of a regular currency, the maintenance of economic life, and existence itself would be impossible for our epople. In the interest of Germany's future, as in that of the Rhineland and the Ruhr, this danger must be removed. In order to preserve the life of the people and the State we are today faced with the dire necessity of relinquishing the struggle.

"We realize that in doing so we are calling upon the inhabitants of the occupied territories to make sacrifices of a moral character still greater than those in which they acquiesced up to now. Their struggle has been heroic, their self-control incomparable. We shall never forget what the occupied territories achieved and what has been given up by those who preferred to leave their native country rather than be disloyal to the fatherland.

"The Government's first duty is to see that the prisoners are released and that those who have been expelled may return. The fight for the elementary rights of humanity comes before all economic and material concerns. Germany has declared her readiness to assume most severe material sacrifices for the liberty of German subjects and German soil but that liberty is for us not an object of negotiation for barter.

"It depends on the powers which have invaded our territory and on their allies by adhering to this idea to give peace to Germany or to bring about by rejection of this peace all the consequences which would ensue with respect to the relations between peoples. We invite the German people to stand closely together in the days of dire moral and material strife which are to come. Only thus shall be frustrated all projects for dismemberment of the Reich, and the nation recover its honor, life and liberty, which is its imprescriptible right."

Germany's foreign troubles are just about to commence, and the time to speak of "capitulation" has not yet exactly arrived, for the fate of the Ruhr and Rhineland is intimately interlocked with the impending resumption of the reparations problem.

This is the gist of a candid statement today by a Government leader to a private audience of Berlin editors, who were frankly told that the Government contemplated the immediate future with profound skepticism, if not pessimism, and that it was not deluding itself into the belief that daylight and freedom awaited Germany, now that she had relinquished passive resistance.

"Our troubles are only just beginning," he continued, "and we have yet to learn the Entente's attitude toward our abandonment of passive resistance and whether the occupying powers are sincerely desirous of co-operating with us in the complex task of restoring order."

The question of whether the administration of the German railways is to revert exclusively to German nationals and whether the evicted officials will be reinstated constitutes only one of the mooted points on which the Government is not in a position as yet to express an opinion. The Government's outstanding concern, said this official, occupies itself with the fate of the Rhineland, and it is a cardinal point on which clarity is demanded.

On this issue the Government's spokesman expressed himself with a frankness that amazed his audience.

"If France makes demands in this direction," he said, "it remains to be seen how the other Allies will view such a procedure. Such an eventuality would, of course, create a new European situation and it would then become necessary to choose between capitulation and a breach. The time to talk of this has not yet arrived, but the German Government hardly looks for pronounced activity in favor of Germany in Entente circles. Until England, Belgium and Italy have spoken it would be premature to mention breach.

"If, on the other hand, we have to deal exclusively with France, it would be a simple matter to conclude, in view of M. Poincaré's latest speeches, that negotiations would lead to nothing. The Rhineland were to remain under French the entire Entente, on the one hand, and Germany, on the other."

He believed that all the creditor nations were entitled to have a voice in deciding whether the Ruhr and the Rhineland were to remain under French sovereignty, and added that Germany did not purpose to indulge in such a dangerous international experiment as flatly to go on record before the Allies had expressed themselves.

"The German Government," he asserted, "does not purpose to leave the population of the Ruhr and the Rhineland to itself, for that would deservedly be stigmatized as treachery on the part of the German Government, which has given to the peoples of those territories repeated assurance of its determination to stand by them. The time for critical decisions is fast approaching; M. Poincaré must show his colors; so must England and Italy. It will then be up to Germany to decide what measure of her demands must be insisted upon or whether she is prepared to refuse to affix her signature as an alternative."

Chancellor Stresemann was closeted with the Foreign Relations Committee for two hours. He informed the Deputies that the Government would not make a declaration in the plenary session of the Reichstag on Thursday, as originally planned, as it preferred to await possible reaction by the Entente to the newly created situation. The Chancellor will probably open the debate on the foreign situation with the Government's statement next Tuesday.

So far the Government is without the slightest inkling as to the manner in which the occupying powers will respond to the new situation. Advices from the occupied areas express apprehension that France is determined to profit by the consternation and confusion resulting from the German surrender by actively attempting to promote her Rhineland plans, especially so far as Düsseldorf and Essen are concerned, the moment the Germans proceed to reinstate themselves.

These fears are based not only on the familiar suspicions, but also on more recent developments, such as the attempt to create "a Rhineland currency" and the increasing activities of the Separatists.

The Prussian Cabinet has decided to establish public feeding stations throughout Prussia in order to ameliorate the growing social distress arising out of the dislocation of food supplies and the chaotic price ranges. The step was decided upon after a careful canvass of the situation in the metropolitan and industrial sections, where the workers have shown a desire to be paid in food rather than in paper marks.

The Prussian Government has issued an appeal to the various municipalities and to private donors for co-operation in establishing the feeding stations, and is also seeking volunteers to operate the kitchens.

POINCARE IS CAUTIOUS.

Will Do Nothing Till Ruhr Resistance Is Called Off.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

PARIS, Sept. 26.—The most important question in the world today is: What will France do with her Ruhr victory? It is too early to give the answer, but one can give the indication that France is determined to do better with it than she did with the common victory in 1918.

Premier Poincaré is sitting tight. The only word from the Quai d'Orsay today is: "We are waiting." That means that M. Poincaré considers the proclamation of President Ebert today in Berlin signifies nothing to him until it has been put into practice by withdrawal of Berlin's resistance orders. Paris takes full note of the ill-will expressed in the German President's declaration, and that spirit on the part of the Germans is most likely to make the French Premier move very slowly and cautiously.

M. Poincaré, it is explained, considers that the real fight to get Germany to pay and to break her spirit of resistance to the treaty has not yet been won, as the tone of Herr Ebert's proclamation shows. While it is popular in Paris just now to compare the German backdown with the surrender of November, 1918, M. Poincaré would prefer to regard it in the same category as the first victory of the Marne.

His spokesmen emphasize that Berlin's decision does not mean the payment of reparations at once and the reaction on the exchanges today indicates the realization that however happy the coming negotiations may be, France will not begin large collections from Germany for some time to come. Indeed, the last three days the buying of francs is to be credited largely to other financial centres than Paris.

The turn of the Ruhr events has placed M. Poincaré in a position of dominance in international politics. It is his victory, his friends emphasize. America warned him not to occupy the Ruhr and England did likewise. He did it anyhow and credit for the result belongs to him.

From all parts of the world comes the query what will M. Poincaré do now? The best answer seems to be that he will arrange Ruhr armistice terms, to remain in effect until a more permanent arrangement is made between the Allies and Germany. These armistice terms, which would follow the recall of all Berlin's orders for resistance, would provide supervision by the occupying authorities of municipal administrations, in the Ruhr and Rhineland, operation of the railroads of the Ruhr and Rhineland by the French and Belgians, exploitation of the Ruhr State-owned mines for account of the Reparation Commission, and the collection of a coal tax of 40 per cent. and of a tax of 26 per cent. on Ruhr manufactured exports. In the mines and railroads the Germans would work under supervision of occupying officials. The French have in the last few days sent a large number of officials to the Ruhr in the preparation for the collection of imposts and the issuance of export permits.

With this armistice arrangement in effect M. Poincaré would await proposals from Germany, it being his attitude that the Allies hold security for non-payment and that it is up to the debtor to manage debt acquitment. This attitude is largely dictated by the miserable failure of all attempts of the Allies in the last four years to tell Germany how to pay. And the proposals by Germany, if they recognized continued occupation of the Ruhr, would be communicated to the allied Governments and Reparation Commission.

An allied reparations conference would then be in order, to be followed by a conference with the Germans, not for fixing terms but for discussion of execution of the allied terms. Much would depend on how the Germans behaved meanwhile.

It is emphasized in Paris that France and Belgium have made no advance promises about withdrawing troops from the Ruhr or permitting the return of expelled Germans or releasing those imprisoned. The intention of France is to reduce troops down to the number required to protect civilian officials, and it is argued here that this all depends on the Germans.

The French and Belgians will exercise their own discretion about the return of expelled Germans, the guiding principle being that they may return in so far as their return does not hamper Ruhr administration.

So Paris still waits on Germany to see whether Ruhr surrender carries with it willingness to try to pay reparations, or whether it carries some other intention. What Paris does depends on what Berlin does.

It is believed here that England, which has not approved Ruhr occupation, will leave entirely in M. Poincaré's hands the initial moves and will come in only when it is a question of examining German offers to the Allies which shall meet the primary French conditions of an end of resistance in the Ruhr and continued occupation of the Ruhr.

DUESSELDORF, Sept. 26.—When German surrender in the Ruhr and Rhineland becomes complete and all resistance ceases the French will be in the position to exploit the victory immediately, full plans to this end having been perfected several months ago.

With the German railroad workers at their posts the whole railroad system will again run normally, but under control of the French-Belgian régime, which in turn is under command of the allied Commander in Chief, General Degoutte. French and Belgian railroad agents will exercise control of exploitation, while accountants will control German administration and bookkeeping.

Similar methods will be applied to customs and taxes. The number of French customs offices will be doubled—in view of the imminent German surrender large numbers have left France for the Ruhr within the last few days. They will control the German customs on the lines laid down when the interallied customs cordon was established in 1920. The wine, tobacco and coal taxes will also be collected by Franco-Belgian agents.

The changed disposition of Government servants is illustrated by the return to work of 600 Post Office clerks and chief officials at Wiesbaden. They have occupied the jobs held since Feb. 20 by a French staff. Sentries, however, continue to guard the buildings.

A similar return to work has already occurred at Coblenz, and other cities are expected to follow shortly.

Surrender Depresses Ruhr.

DORTMUND, Sept. 26 (Associated Press).—The news of the Government's abandonment of passive resistance reached the mining section of the Ruhr late Tuesday afternoon, and although the local newspapers have been forecasting such action, the official verification of the Government's plan produced a feeling of profound depression among all classes of the people.

The labor leaders are admonishing workers to remain calm. They warn them against supporting communistic agitation, which they say is now seeking to feed on the present critical situation. Disappointment over the lost battle is keenest in the ranks of the railway workers, who obviously are anything but cordial toward the French régimé.

The full effects of the Government's decision to cease passive resistance is expected to be first felt next week. The decision came unexpectedly and produced considerable confusion by reason of the fact that the labor leaders were unable to prepare their followers for the official news.

The organized railway workers throughout the Ruhr have definitely resolved not to work under French supervision.

BALDWIN MEETS CABINET.

Explains Position Taken at His Meeting With Poincare.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—Prime Minister Baldwin will deliver tomorrow an address to the students of the Philip Stott College of Political and Social study at Overstone Park near Northampton. It is understood he is unlikely to make more than a brief reference to his meeting with M. Poincaré.

Mr. Baldwin's intention apparently is to reserve anything like a full statement on the European situation until the opening of the Imperial Conference in London next Monday. A meeting of the Cabinet was held this morning and Mr. Baldwin took the opportunity of saying to a full gathering of the Ministers what he had already communicated to the individual members of the Government.

It may be taken that at this meeting Mr. Baldwin made it clear that in his conversation with M. Poincaré he did not in any way commit this country to a change of policy. It can be said with authority that what is of importance is not that either the French or British Prime Ministers were brought to a "conversion" to the point of view of the other, but that a new friendliness of outlook was established which cleared the stage for consideration of developments which are already taking place.

The move made in Paris was in the direction of creating a new psychological atmosphere and beyond the establishment of this atmosphere it is probable nothing more tangible has yet been achieved. Events now wait on what is to happen in Germany. No official announcement has been received by the British Government from Berlin tonight of cessation of resistance.

LONG BAVARIAN AGITATION.

Nationalists Organized to Fight Prussian Authority.

Ever since early last Spring, when Adolph Hitler and his reactionary followers defied the Bavarian Cabinet, it has been believed that it would only be a question of time before the Nationalists would be able sufficiently to centralize their power and overthrow the Government. Decrees as well as supreme court decisions were launched against the new Bavarian Fascismo, but without avail. The pressure from Berlin only increased the antipathy against the authoritative Government without the latter being able to execute the dictates from the Prussian capital.

In order to emphasize the charges that the Berlin Government before the war was responsible for the small part played in the Empire by Catholic Bavaria, Nationalist propaganda has recited the details of the War of 1866, when Bavaria sided with Austria against Prussia, of 1870, when it would have sided with France if it had only known the truth about Bismarck's scheme to precipitate war, and of 1914, when it was charged that the Munich Government was kept in utter ignorance of the diplomatic correspondence of the Wilhelmstrasse and Potsdam which led the way to the World War.

The principal point in the Bavarian Nationalist propaganda is that Bavarians, by their culture, religion, and life, object to being dominated by Prussia in any form, and consider that the Prussia of today is responsible for the inability of the Reich to rehabilitate itself. The press of Munich has long foreseen a new reactionary putsch in Berlin the moment the Ebert Government should attempt to restore normal trade conditions by making peace with France, and has repeatedly advised Bavaria to anticipate such a coup by asserting its independence of the Reich; otherwise it would be dominated by a Prussia worse than any in the past, the alternative of which would be communism.

Dr. von Kahr, who appears to have been made Dictator, was Premier in 1921 when Munich defied the Government at Berlin, particularly in regard to the demobilization of the Einwohnnerwehr, or Home Guard, which had been organized in order to save Bavaria from Bolshevism but whose continued service was deemed an outstanding threat of secession.

SOFIA, Sept. 26.—Acting upon information received that a rising here was timed for tomorrow, the Government arrested some 500 local Communists last night and this morning.

The situation in the neighborhood of Ferdinandovo, on the railway between Sofia and the Danube port of Lom Palanka, has become, for the moment, rather worse, as the Communist insurgents have extended their activities to the adjacent town of Berkovitza, near the Yugoslav frontier. They seized Berkovitza, murdering the Mayor and some fifteen other non-Communist inhabitants.

The temporary success of the Communists is partly due to the fact that there are a good many of them in the Ferdinandovo district, which is generally regarded as their stronghold, and also to the statements of the insurgents, who announced that King Boris had been killed, and thus they recruited a number of non-Communists. Many of the insurgents are armed with rifles of the Russian 1923 model.

Troops concentrated from all over the country began an offensive today which has almost recovered Berkovitza and promises to put an end to this particular Soviet movement, supporters of which have begun to retire toward the Yugoslav frontier. In one case they engaged Bulgarian troops that were across their line of retreat, and suffered considerable losses.

LONDON, Sept. 26 (Associated Press).—Late advices from reliable Bulgarian sources indicate that the Government for the present has the revolutionary movement under control, but the army and police are so limited by the Treaty of Neuilly that doubt is expressed whether the Government will be able to check further outbreaks.

The army consists of about 20,000 men. They have the problem of keeping order among 5,000,000 people scattered over an area of 40,000 square miles and patrolling nearly 1,000 miles of border.

Like most European countries, Bulgaria is confronted with grave elements of unrest. Agrarians, Macedonians and Communists all harbor grievances against the Government. It is disclosed that the present communistic fomentation has the support of at least part of the Agrarians, who have not forgiven the death of Stambulisky and the wholesale punishment of their leaders, but the prime movers in the present outbreak are Communists, who, it is declared, are largely financed and equipped by Russians.

Political passion among the various parties burns at a white heat and all the efforts to conciliate them have failed. The most hopeful factor for the Government in the present situation is that the peasants, who form 83 per cent. of the population, are occupied with their corn crops, which are now ready for harvesting, and they are too sensible and philosophical to be inveigled into a movement which probably would bring them no profit.

King Boris is straining every effort to establish peace among the leaders of the various political groups, but without much success. He is described as a pathetic figure, spending most of his time in seclusion in Vranje Palace, near Sofia, always fearing what the next day may bring forth. He is not regarded as in any immediate danger, however, as he is extremely popular among all classes.

All the members of the Cabinet are closely guarded. A severe censorship is being exercised over the newspapers and close espionage kept on all Communists and other agitators. Pedestrians are not allowed in the streets after dark, and the Foreign Legations have armed guards outside.

JAPAN AGAIN SHAKEN BY SEVERE QUAKE

Disturbance Centres Around City of Kure, 450 Miles Southwest of Tokio.

TOKIO, Sept. 26 (Associated Press).—Another severe earthquake occurred in Japan on Monday in the Hiroshima district. The quake was especially violent around the city of Kure. The extent of the damage has not been determined, as communications have been disrupted.

Kure is in the extreme southwestern end of the island of Hondo, and approximately 450 miles southwest of Tokio.

Floods followed a typhoon yesterday in the Fukagawa and Honjo wards of Tokio. Many have suffered as a result, as thousands of refugees were encamped in rude shacks in these wards. The storm damaged rice and other crops in many prefectures.

Thousands of men, chiefly professional men and clerks, are out of employment here as a result of the earthquake. They are also without hope of obtaining employment for months to come, although there is plenty of work for common laborers cleaning away débris and at construction work.

The authorities are faced with the problem of caring temporarily for these men. They have been advised to leave Tokio, but there is nowhere they can go.

The clothing problem is next to that of unemployment. Great quantities of clothing were destroyed, and it will be months before merchants can restock. Meanwhile, cold weather is approaching. Even now the nights are colder and campers are suffering considerably.

Efforts are being made by the Government and the Red Cross to deal with a threatened epidemic of dysentery and typhoid fever. Many cases already have been reported.

The Japanese Government is making inquiries in the United States looking toward the purchase of 120,000 tons of building material.

OKLAHOMA TROOPS PREVENT SESSION

proceeding none save the military approached nearer the chamber than the military guard stationed about twenty feet in front of the main entrance. About one hundred soldiers were at the Capitol and 500 in the city.

Declare They Met and Recessed.

Undaunted by the result of their first skirmish with the military forces, the legislators prepared tonight for the next move in their attempt to meet to consider the official acts of Governor Walton.

A statement by Representative W. D. McBee, a leader in the Assembly move, declared that today's proceedings constituted a meeting of the House, notwithstanding its interruption by troops acting under orders of Governor Walton.

With the statement, Representative McBee made public what he declared to be the Official Journal of the House. It detailed the brief action which terminated in the clearance of the Capitol corridors by the military.

Prevented from meeting or even caucusing, the House members tonight pinned their hopes for protection against the military authorities upon the efforts of a legal committee which is preparing court proceedings to mark the next stage in the conflict.

That there would be no immediate attempt to assemble again in defiance of martial law regulations was the promise made late today by House leaders to Adjutant General Baird H. Markham. Observers predicted that they would await a court ruling before essaying another assembly.

Representative W. B. Disney, Chairman of the Legal Committee, said tonight that the court proceedings could not get under way before morning. He refused to indicate what form the action might take or whether it would be instituted in the State Supreme Court or the Federal Court here.

It is expected, however, that an injunction will be sought against Governor Walton, with the possibility that National Guard officers will be made parties to the suit.

Attorney General George F. Short, who will oppose the action in behalf of the State when the court battle begins, told newspaper men that several types of legal action might be filed. He added that he did not know what to expect. The nature of the proceedings, he said, would determine the place of filing.

The "Journal of the House," designed to show that the session was regularly called today and that it was dispersed, is expected to be made the basis for the suit.

The Journal, written on stationery of the local hotel where the legislators make their headquarters, described the proceedings in detail as to words and actions.

A statement issued by the legislators declared that "the fight had only just begun," asserted their right to meet, and assured the people of the State that constitutional government would be restored.

Governor's Sleuths Arrest His Foe.

About ten of Governor Walton's armed secret operatives met the legislators at the hotel and forbade them to hold a session there.

A group of these operatives this afternoon arrested Campbell Russell, former Chairman of the State Corporation Commission and a bitter political enemy of Governor Walton.

Russell was taken to military headquarters and later to jail. A crowd of several hundred persons followed the officers and Russell. He was charged with "disorderly conduct and attempting to incite riot."

He had been distributing pamphlets attacking the Governor when arrested.

Adjt. Gen. Markham declared the military authorities "had nothing to do" with Russell's arrest.

Following Russell's arrest members of the Legislature, appealed to Adjt. Gen. Markham "for protection" from the Executive operatives, and upon the Adjutant General's orders Colonel Key personally ordered every secret service man in the hotel to leave. They departed quietly.

No session of the military court was held today. It was intimated that the tribunal had been disbanded for the day to permit its officers to be detailed for service at the Capitol.

The Governor's office at the Capitol, which was open early in the morning, had been closed before the arrival of the House members. Governor Walton remained at his residence throughout the morning.

This was "Oklahoma Day" at the State Fair here and several other offices closed as the noon hour approached.

Adjutant General B. H. Markham arrived at the Capitol at 11:30 o'clock to take personal command of the troops on duty.

The first of the Legislators to arrive at the capitol were met by military men carrying policemen's clubs and sidearms. None carried a service rifle. The lawmakers were permitted to enter the building singly.

Multitudes crowded the streets leading to the capitol.

Two sentinels posted at the door of the hall of the House of Representatives carried service rifles. Across the corridor, a similar guard was posted at the entry to the Senate Chamber. It was estimated that approximately 100 guardsmen were in and about the building. Every corridor, every outside entrance and all driveways in the immediate vicinity were patrolled.

At 11:49 A. M., the legislators grouped themselves within twenty-five feet of the door of the House Chambers.

A statement warning House members not to carry to the capitol building "any weapon even so small as a penknife," was issued to the legislators by W. D. McBee, leader in the special session program, who declared "there must be not the least thing provocative in our attitude."

John L. Graham, assistant Oklahoma City postmaster, notified McBee that he had received instructions today from the Postmaster General that the Post Office could not be used for any business other than governmental.

McBee assured him that the legislators had "never thought of using the Federal building" for the proposed session.

Seeks $150,000 Damages From Klan

MUSKOGEE, Okla., Sept. 26.—A petition seeking $150,000 damages from the Ku Klux Klan of Tulsa and State officials of the organization was received by W. V. The petition has not been filed pending the guarantee of filing fees.

to crystallize constructively the policies of President Harding he would need all the time at his disposal between now and the convening of Congress. All that time, he said, must be spent in laborious work. He explained that he was working under great stress. Innumerable matters were demanding his earnest attention, and he was obliged to give close, careful consideration to the preparation of his forthcoming message to Congress and to constructive legislation relating to the first session of a new Congress.

After the interview with the President the delegation gave out a statement in which it said:

"The delegation wishes to say that it was the President's earnest desire to accept the committee's invitation, but that in view of the situation in Washington, in America and throughout the world, he reluctantly reached a decision to take the delegation's advice, through a letter to be read on the occasion of the memorial service on Nov. 2, in New York, to give expression to his love of the late President and evaluation of his character and great services to his fellow-men."

Coolidge Leaves Choice to Republican Committee.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Fred W. Upham of Chicago, Treasurer of the Republican National Committee, recently returned from Europe, had luncheon with President Coolidge today. It was said afterward that they had talked over the selection of the place for holding the Republican National Convention of 1924 and that the President had declared he had an open mind on the subject and trusted to the judgment of the Republican National Committee in making a choice.

Considerable politics is involved in the discussion within the Republican Party of the selection of the convention city. The choice lies between Chicago, San Francisco and Cleveland, each of which is a candidate. Various objections have been raised to all three places. Chicago, the favorite convention city in the past, is accused of being too hot during the convention period and of charging high hotel rates. One objection raised to Cleveland is that its hotel accommodations are not adequate for the convention crowds.

San Francisco is ready to furnish a large guarantee fund for the convention and many delegates would like to go there, having heard glorious accounts of the weather during the Democratic convention of 1920, the lack of profiteering on the part of the hotels and restaurants and splendid management by the local committees.

Two main objections have been raised to San Francisco and they are both political. One is that the railroad journey from the greater part of the United States would be so expensive that charges would be made that many delegates had been "bought" by candidates for the Presidential nomination through paying their heavy expenses for a trip to the Pacific Coast. Timidity by the politicians is being manifested over this fear.

Another consideration urged by some regular Republicans in opposition to San Francisco is that it is the home of Senator Johnson. They appear afraid that Johnson sentiment would be so rampant among the spectators at the convention if held in San Francisco that the delegates would be stampeded into giving the nomination to the Senator. When this view was expressed to President Harding as a reason for using his influence against choosing San Francisco for the convention, he brushed it aside with the remark that if Johnson could win the nomination over him he could do it in any place as well as in San Francisco.

A rather general opinion among Republican politicians is that Chicago has the best chance, but it is acknowledged that the San Francisco people are making an impressive contest for the honor.

THE UNIVERSAL BEVERAGE

In Europe the goat, the ewe and the ass supply many people with milk;

In Arabia and Persia the camel; in Tartary the mare; in Africa and China the buffalo;

In Tibet the yak; in Lapland the reindeer; in South America the llama and vicuna;

But at CHILDS the milk of the cow, man's great good friend, enjoys exclusive favor.

Whether taken as a beverage or in other foods, it balances the diet.

NORRIE ABSOLVED BY AN EYE-WITNESS

Mrs. Thompson Gets Affidavit by Taxi Chauffeur—Calls Reports Misleading.

DETECTIVE BLAMES DRIVER

Tells Authorities, After Investigation, Whisky Was Found in Car.

Mrs. Lewis Stamford Thompson of Brookdale Farm, near Red Bank, N. J., in denying what she described as "misleading and sensational" reports concerning the motor-car accident in which her nephew, Lewis Gordon Norrie, Princeton senior, was killed early Sunday morning at Asbury Park, yesterday made public the contents of an affidavit which she said was made by an eyewitness, who absolved Norrie of blame for the accident. The signer of the affidavit, James Farrell, driver for the Seacoast Taxi Company of Long Branch, said the Norrie car was not going faster than twenty miles an hour. He said he saw no one in the Norrie car who appeared to have been drinking. Mrs. Thompson said:

"The impression has been given that it was a party of rowdies. It was not a party of rowdies but a family party staying at my house. The party at my house included friends and relatives who had come to see the races. Payne Whitney was there, and it was he who, after we were notified of the accident, arranged for a special train that was kept waiting at the Pennsylvania Terminal for more than an hour while a search was being made for medical assistance and which broke all records for the run to Asbury Park when it covered the distance in 1 hour and 4 minutes, carrying Drs. Charles A. Elsberg and James Russell.

"The impression has been given also that Lewis G. Norrie had been drinking. He had not been drinking, because he had been in training for the Princeton hockey team. There has been a lot of talk about mysterious doings at some road house, all of which is entirely unfounded.

"The persons in the car driven by Mr. Norrie and in the second car driven by Tyler F. Bronson left my house about 11 P. M., went to the Rumson Country Club, and on their way back to my house stopped for a little while to dance at Biggett's Mansion, one of the largest hotels in Asbury.

"There was no secrecy about or attempt to conceal the names of members of the two automobile parties. The first thought of relatives and friends was to hurry the injured to the hospital, where the authorities were furnished with the names and all the further information sought concerning the members of the party."

Mrs. Thompson said that in the car driven by her nephew who was killed was Jane Scales, a schoolmate of her daughter at Richmond, Va., who was on the front seat with Mr. Norrie but who escaped injury, and in the rear seat, Adele Ryan, who was sitting beside L. T. Preston, another nephew of Mrs. Thompson.

In the Bronson car were Miss Geraldine Thompson, daughter of Mrs. Thompson; Lewis Thompson Jr., Berent W. Williams and Arthur W. Little Jr. Mrs. Thompson said the Norrie family believed the accident was caused by one of the cars skidding on the wet roadway after a light rainfall.

Blame for the accident was placed upon Mr. Norrie by County Detective Charles O. Davenport of Monmouth County, who yesterday turned in a report of his investigation to County Prosecutor Charles F. Sexton. Davenport said he had advised the Prosecutor that there was no occasion to make any arrest. He filed his report after making an inquiry which convinced him that members of the Norrie party had been drinking. He said he found in the tonneau two bottles of Scotch whisky partly emptied, and a siphon of vichy from which some of the contents had been drawn.

DETAINS NEGRO WOMAN HERE IN STOKES CASE

Banton Frees Her After She Makes Statement Asked by Chicago Prosecutor.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—In pursuing its investigation into the alleged attempts of W. E. D. Stokes, New York millionaire, to defame the character of his wife, Helen Elwood Stokes, who is suing for divorce, the State's Attorney's office today revealed that for twenty-four hours it had secretly held one witness in jail, caused the arrest of another in New York and found a former frequenter of Chicago's underworld alleged to know of attempts made by agents to besmirch Mrs. Stokes. The police issued a general order for the arrest of Joe Brunner, alleged to have paid for supposedly perjured affidavits from underworld habitués concerning Mrs. Stokes.

Howard Miller, a negro, was the man held in jail and his wife, Nellie Rose Miller, was the woman arrested in New York whither she fled from Chicago. Both were released after making sworn statements. The woman had made an affidavit that she saw Mrs. Stokes in the apartment of a man in New York. On the dates she named Mrs. Stokes was ill in Denver, according to Charles Wharton, Assistant State's Attorney.

On request yesterday of Charles S. Wharton, Assistant State's Attorney of Chicago, Nellie Rose Miller, a negro, was taken to District Attorney Banton's office to be examined about an affidavit she was alleged to have made in relation to Mrs. W. E. D. Stokes. The woman was met by Detective Sergeant Bernard Flood on her arrival at the Pennsylvania Terminal from Chicago and volunteered to accompany him to Mr. Banton's office.

She volunteered to make a statement to Assistant District Attorney Albert B. Unger, and Mr. Benton telephoned to Chicago to learn if criminal charges had been lodged against her. Mr. Wharton informed him that no charges had been lodged against her and the District Attorney told the Chicago prosecutor she had made a statement which would be forwarded to him this morning. He added that he could not detain the woman under the circumstances.

While the woman was making her statement to a stenographer, Mr. Stokes and his attorney, John A. Nugent, appeared at the prosecutor's office. When the District Attorney announced that the negro was free to go, Mr. Stokes picked up her traveling bag and, accompanied by Mr. Nugent, escorted her to the street.

DENIES ROYAL ENGAGEMENT

But Epoca of Rome Suggests Princess May Wed Belgian Heir.

ROME, Sept. 26.—The Epoca today, "on the authority of a member of the Italian court," denies the rumor of an engagement of Crown Prince Humbert of Italy to Princess Marie José of Belgium. The report is declared to be "unfounded, audacious and premature."

The Epoca adds that "if the happy event of linking the two royal families is to be announced," it is more probable that it will be the engagement of Princess Giovanna of Italy to the Duke of Brabant, Crown Prince of Belgium.

FLOGGING IN FLORIDA BLAMED FOR DEATH

Victim Said He Believed Injury That Proved Fatal Was Due to Lashing.

BROTHER ASKS INQUIRY

Seeks Companion Who Was in State Hospital to Corroborate the Story.

William Fetter, 23 years old, of 4,338 Barnes Avenue, the Bronx, died Monday night at Fordham Hospital under circumstances which have caused his brother, Frederick Fetter, a member of the Fire Department, living at the same address, to ask an investigation in an effort to learn whether his brother's death was the result of a flogging which he is said to have received some months ago at the Florida State Hospital at Chattahoochee.

Fetter died five hours after his brother had given him a transfusion of eighteen ounces of blood in a vain attempt to save his life.

Before he died Fetter said he believed the injury which caused his death was the result of the flogging.

About a year ago while stealing a ride on a freight train in Florida, Fetter was arrested for vagrancy and sentenced to a turpentine camp for six months. While there he had a dispute with a keeper and, in a fit of anger, he told relatives, turned on the shower bath in the detention house, flooding the place. For this, he said, he was beaten and then sent to the Florida State Hospital, where he had more trouble, as the result of which, he said, four or five attendants overpowered him and gave him eighteen lashes. He said he believed it was this flogging that caused renewed trouble of the point of his spinal column, which was injured in a football game nin years before.

Dr. Karl S. Kennard, Assistant Medical Examiner, performed an autopsy Tuesday afternoon, and found that death was due to blood poisoning, caused by an abscess of the spinal vertebrae, which, Dr. Kennard said, might have been caused by such an injury as Fetter described.

Fetter and an ex-service man named Kelly were brought to New York from the hospital in Florida last June in charge of an attendant.

In an effort to find out how much truth there is in the story told by his brother, Frederick Fetter said he was trying to find Kelly. He will also examine letters Fetter sent to his mother at Tenafly, N. J., while in the Florida hospital, in which he is said to have made complaints about the treatment he received.

Officials Deny Charge.

CHATTAHOOCHEE, Fla., Sept. 26.—When officials of the Florida State Hospital were notified by a TIMES representative that the death of William Fetter was attributed to a flogging received while he was an inmate of this institution they said there was no foundation for such a charge. When State officials at Tallahassee learned of the statement they came to the hospital and investigated the affair. Attorney General Buford said he found the charges unfounded.

Italian Ambassador Returns.

Prince Gelasio Gaetani, Italian Ambassador to the United States, will arrive this morning from Naples on the Lloyd Sabaudo liner, Conte Rosso, after a two months vacation in Italy. He will leave this afternoon for Washington.

able that such a claim will not be pressed.

ROME, Sept. 26.—A ditpatch to the Giornale d'Italia from Corfu says that Italian transports today were embarking troops and war materials from the island, which recently was seized by the Italians after the assassination of the Italian members of the Greco-Albanian boundary commission.

ROME, Sept. 26 (Associated Press).—The Italian press and public are expressing gratification over the decision of the Conference of Ambassadors in awarding Italy the 50,000,000 lire deposited by Greece as a guarantee of reparation in the Greco-Albanian frontier murder case.

The newspapers say that this was the only logical solution of the affair, and some of them express considerable resentment over what is termed the "new and strange opposition of English policy toward Italy."

Most of the newspapers point out that the assistance of France contributed greatly to overcoming what is declared to have been the obstinacy of the British representatives, which is generally attributed to "underhand financial influences."

GENEVA, Sept. 26 (Associated Press)—The Greco-Italian crisis was revived here tonight by Nicholas Politis, former Greek Minister of Foreign Affairs, now representative of his country on the Council of the League of Nations.

Assuming from press forecasts that Greece would be obliged to pay Italy the 30,000,000 lire deposited by her as security for indemnity, M. Politis declared that such a decision on the part of the Conference of Ambassadors would be an outrageous injustice, and would prove that the big nations of Europe are in complicity to strike a blow at a small and defenseless country.

M. Politis charged the Conference of Ambassadors with having reached its conclusions without waiting for the final report of the commisison of inquiry into the murder of the Italian members of the Greco-Albanian Boundary Commission, and insisted that several members of the mission were convinced that the Greek Government was not responsible and that the murders constituted an act of personal vengeance against General Tellini, head of the Italian delegation, and were plotted in Albanian territory.

It was declared by M. Politis that the investigation was continuing because a bandit who surrendered had confessed to the Greek authorities that ten days previous to the assassinations he had been requested by the Albanian chief of police to organize the murder on Greek territory of a member of the frontier commission, which he had refused to do.

Contending that the inquiry was entitled to continue until tomorrow, M. Politis said he failed to understand the haste of the Conference of Ambassadors.

ATHENS, Sept. 26.—The notorious Greek brigand named Memos today presented himself to the Greek authorities at Janina, and declared that he is in possession of valuable information, which, he feels, would surely lead to the immediate arrest of the murderers of General Tellini and his colleagues. The Greek Government has [illegible] a reward of 20,000 drachmae for his capture, but he has succeeded in escaping across the Albano-Greek frontier, and has joined the Albanian gendarmerie.

Last Monday, Memos boldly entered the office of the Chief of Police at Janina and calmly requested permission to give evidence before the interallied commission inquiring into the murders on the condition that the Greek Government protect his life, which was in danger. This request was granted, and Memos appeared before the interallied commission.

GENEVA, Sept. 26.—Backed by France as in the Conference of Ambassadors, Signor Salandra, Italy's representative, decided today that the questions of the League's competence in the present Corfu incident ought not to be submitted to the Hague Court, but should be settled by the Council itself. His argument was that the questions were too vague and cite the definite case; but, himself has whittled from them every vestige of reference to the case of Corfu.

Mr. Wood, for England, answered that as far as he was concerned he would be well contented to make them far less vague and cite the definite case. But egged on by M. Hanotaur, Poincaré's agent here, Signor Salandra stuck to his argument that the Council whose competence his country denied three weeks ago should be the sole arbiter of whether that competence existed.

WARD RESTS CASE; OFFERS NO WITNESS

against the walls, and four rows of chairs were placed between the lawyers' tables and the fence dividing the room. Judge Mills, wearing his black skull cap, was with his associates, State Senator Ellwood M. Rabenold and Allan R. Campbell, at the defense table. Mrs. Ward, who had visited her husband in the jail for an hour before court opened, entered and shook hands with the attorneys, with the eyes of the crowd, 50 per cent. women, centred upon her.

Ward Greets Lawyers.

Ward came in one minute before 10 o'clock. He made his way slowly through the crowd, and with a smile at his wife warmly greeted his lawyers. He held a brief conference with Senator Rabenold, who has sat at his client's elbow throughout the trial, while Mrs. Ward glanced through one of the many letters, from all parts of the country, that are finding their way to the characters in the drama at the Westchester County Court House.

Promptly at 10 o'clock Justice Wagner ascended the bench, and as the court attachés' rapping died away he bowed to the jury, to counsel and settled back in his high-backed, green leather-tufted chair to hear Judge Mills.

"Your Honor," said Judge Mills, "I enter formally each one of the nine motions which your Honor denied yesterday. I presume that you deny them again?"

Justice Wagner nodded. At that time no hint that the defense would go to the jury solely on the prosecution's case had come from Ward's side. It was expected, from the hint dropped by Judge Mills, that witnesses would be called to substantiate, in so far as it proved possible, the reality of the fugitive "Charley Ross" and "Jack Rogers," alleged by Ward as the blackmailers whose plot ended in the death of Peters.

"I shall then begin my summing up," said Judge Mills simply, and his sudden move sent a commotion rippling through the court. Attorney General Sherman, who had been leaning his head against an arm crooked to rest on the table, sat up quickly. He shot a surprised look over his shoulder at his aids—Special Deputy Attorney General Thomas J. O'Neill and Deputy Attorney General Wilber W. Chambers.

Mills Starts His Argument.

Ward and his wife hitched their chairs around to watch the jury. A reporter tripped over a chair in his haste to have the wires say: "The defense rested." Judge Mills moved over to the prosecution's table, placed directly in front of the jury box. An overcast sky sent a leaden light into the rather dim room, and he was forced to bend his head lower to peer through his heavy spectacles at his notes.

"It is plain to you," he said, slowly, "that this is the first opportunity I have had in this long trial to look upon you this way and address you, and contradict what my learned adversary has said. We are at the beginning of the end, and I have to say to you that I have the most profound satisfaction that my client has come to the bar of justice in this way, prosecuted by the State, and that he is emerging in this way.

"One of my first satisfactions is in finding nothing in the people's case that was not there before. The cards have been laid out and I have counted them all. They are dog-eared and torn; I have had them before."

Attorney General Sherman, apologetic in manner and voice, broke in at this point. Judge Mills faced him, half-angry, half-surprised.

"I am sorry to interrupt," said the youthful State's lawyer, "but I must. I am trying this case on the evidence."

Justice Wagner nodded a sustainer of the objection and cautioned Judge Mills to keep from comments.

"You were all examined," continued Judge Mills, "before being accepted, to see if you had followed the rumors of the press. I have been a member of the Westchester County Bar Association for many years and believed that I would have to pay the Attorney General the honor to believe that he would bring out something new, but there is nothing.

"Like Old Mariner," He Says.

"You recall in the examination of former District Attorney Weeks, who was our opponent at one stage of this case, that he showed one by one that all except the firearms expert testified before the first Grand Jury. I have been in the case since the first indictment was presented. I am like an old mariner riding the sea; now he steers for the open gate of the home port, realizing that the opposition contains nothing but wind, nothing but near puffs at that. Now with every sail set, holding fast and true, here on this craft, we are home safely as we sought.

"Another satisfaction has been that my own citizens from Westchester County have been in the jury box; ones I have worked with as a bar member. My client is judged by twelve of his own citizens under the Constitution of the United States. My last satisfaction is this, by the grace of no one, but by the Constitution, I may speak for my client. No man shall be deprived of his life, liberty and property. I am entitled to free speech. I am not complaining of laws as enforced. I have gone to my home, day after day, week after week, a weary man because I hadn't talked of this man, and now I speak for him."

Pausing time and again and pacing back and forth, the counsel for the defense would halt often to thrust a forefinger earnestly at the jury to emphasize a point. Now and then he would put his head on one side, beat a clenched fist against an open palm, and confidentially argue with the twelve listening men. "Come now," he would say coaxingly. "Honor bright!" he would say at other stops.

Again and again, as though to persuade the jurors to do likewise, he let his glance rest momentarily upon the pile of dirty clothing heaped before him. The pile was the clothing and cheap shoes, the queer medley of pocket luggage, found on the body baggage of Peters. His singular strategy in attracting attention to a State's exhibit was disclosed later when he furnished the court with a minor climax.

Ralph Ward Enters Court.

Judge Mills, launching into his summation, was touching on the "barbarity of the old English law, which denies to the defense counsel the last word," when Ralph D. Ward, brother of the defendant, came in. There was a quick turning of heads to see if George S. Ward, President of the Ward Baking Company, father of the brothers, and an absentee from this State for months, had finally decided to come to his son's side. Ralph Ward, however, entered alone.

"That old law is still the law in New York State," continued Judge Mills, "although in many States it has been changed. However, I stand ready to answer any question asked by the State or for the consideration of the jury. We have nothing to evade. We came of our own accord to the bar of justice when there was no suspicion against us, and from the very first we have sought an early trial.

"There never was a citizen of old Westchester County who suffered more unjustly than Walter S. Ward. This indictment against him was unfounded. It is my painful duty, and much I regret it, to call your attention to how this Attorney General discharged his office, but here is a man who is in danger of his life and I must.

"Do you jurors want any man persecuted? Do you want any man unfairly treated? I charge here that this man has been most unfairly prosecuted by the State, by the Attorney General. I charge him, first, with the improper coaching and bulldozing of witnesses. You all heard former Troopers Greene and Collins blundering, honestly, of course. You heard how Trooper Greene blundered.

"They took him in hand and they made him change his testimony. These witnesses testified to searching the scene of the death of Peters on their hands and knees. They never were on their hands and knees until they were taken in hand by Mr. Chambers. And did you notice the treatment of Dr. Vail, one of the witnesses called by the State? You could see that he loved Walter S. Ward as a brother might, and did you notice how this man from out of the county, forced to the front, good brother O'Neill, one of our county lawyers?

Shows Picture to Jury.

"Do you remember how brother O'Neill went to the rail and as much as called Dr. Vail a liar and a knave? As Almighty God is my judge, I never knew anything like that to be done in Westchester County. Is that what you want, gentlemen of the jury?

"Remember that picture of the dead man that the Attorney General handed around to you? Remember those swollen and distorted features that you looked at while this Attorney General delayed court?"

Judge Mills quickly picked up from the table a photograph of Mrs. Ward and her two children, taken before the tragedy, on the steps of their former home in Sutton Manor, New Rochelle.

"We show the living," he continued, Handing the picture to Foreman Schilling. "Look at those two lovely kiddies—why if they live seventy years they will not be as old as I am, as I stand here before you this morning."

The lawyer halted his summation as the jurors studied the photograph of the two blond children and of Mrs. Ward.

"I now come to the worst thing of all," the attorney went on. "Here on Monday last, beside my client, sat his loyal and devoted wife, the woman God gave to be with him. She has been with him in these hours of trial and tribulation, but you can see in her face the wearing marks of grief as you compare it with that face in the photograph. She is harried by the persecutions of sixteen long months.

"The Attorney General, without notice, called her to the stand last Monday as a witness against her husband. 'Whom God hath joined together, let no man put asunder.' When you ask a man's wife to testify against him you ask a violation of God's law. Did you ever hear of that before?"

Challenge to Sherman.

Declaring that Mrs. Ward's testimony added nothing to the State's case, Judge Mills said:

"It is a well-established point of law that when a case has been conducted unfairly that the jury may disregard the case. Can a case that has been sought to be mintained by such methods have merit? Cases in Westchester County have never been tried by third-degree methods. I challenge the Attorney General to sum up this case himself and explain this case, and not by proxy."

Charging that the prosecution did not dare to present all its witnesses, Judge Mills said that the inference is that the Attorney General found since their examination that their testimony was false and that he did not dare to present false testimony.

"The lives of Ward and Peters had never crossed before," he continued. "Peters arrived in New York at 5 o'clock that afternoon; he had never been in New York before. Coud Ward have had malice in his heart against Peters. Ward shot down a despised blackmailer; not a blackmailer by interest, but one who hired himself out that night as a gunman."

Judge Mills then took up the opening address of Mr. Sherman, assailing it point by point in an effort to show that the State had failed to keep its promise to prove the charge against Ward.

"Not the slightest shadow of proof has been brought forward against Ward," he said. "The defendant must not prove his innocence; it is up to the State to prove him guilty. The defense rested without bringing forward any witnesses to prove his innocence. Each part of a chain of circumstantial evidence must fit into the other, and this evidence must be inconsistent with the defendant's innocence before he can be found guilty.

"The prosecution hangs its case on the statement that Ward's statement is incredible on its face. They claim to have disproved portions of his story. But they have brought no other version forward for the jury's consideration. This statement was brought to the authorities by Mr. Campbell and Mr. Rabenold. Were these men fools? Were they so foolish as to believe an incredible statement? No."

Judge Mills declared that neither Ward nor any of his lawyers had placed Peters in the band that fired at Ward on the Sunday meeting on a Port Chester highway, three days before the killing. He said that the State ridiculed Ward's statement that, despite the volleys aimed at him, he had gone a second time to meet the band.

"They intended, and this is my theory only," he said, "to run him into Connecticut, to kidnap him, and then force him to write to his father, arriving from Europe the next day, for money."

Guard Family Secret.

The attorney then took up the State's contention that Ward never returned to recover the gun which he said Peters had held when the defendant fired in self-defence. He explained this, by saying that Ward did this to prevent the authorities from thinking Peters had committed suicide. Going over the case against him, Judge Mills finally came to the failure to put Ward on the stand. He attributed this to desire to shield the family secret.

"You gentlemen," he said, "would say as he does: 'I suffer, but my lips shall never publish the shame of others of my blood.'"

At the end of Judge Mills's argument court was adjourned until 10 o'clock this morning.

PLAN CLASSIC ARENA FOR CITY'S THEATRE

Imposing Stone Structure at Speedway and 167th Street Favored by Gallatin.

A SETTING FOR PAGEANTS

Would Seat 3,500 on Natural Slope and Accommodate Variety of Spectacles.

With a $150,000 anonymous endowment believed available, plans for the first open air theatre in New York City are now being worked out tentatively by the Department of Parks, Commissioner Francis D. Gallatin said last night. The project was suggested by Acting Mayor Murray Hulbert, and the site chosen is on the Speedway at 167th Street.

Preliminary sketches for the theatre call for a seating capacity of 3,500, with benches of cut stone or may dictate concrete. A hollow at this point would lend itself to a semi-amphitheatre arrangement, Mr. Gallatin said, and the rising tiers would be built into the cleft of ground, giving a panoramic sweep of Speedway and river.

The theatre is being patterned after the Greek theatre, save that Mr. Gallatin thought it doubtful that the Greek stage with its stone backing and entrances would be reproduced, as this would obscure the view.

In addition to dramas, operas, concerts and recitals, he said, the theatre also would be used for patriotic meetings and for reviews of pageants on the Speedway and for water carnivals and boat races in the stream below.

The open-air theatre would have a flat stage, Mr. Gallatin said, and dressing rooms would be provided underneath.

"a high official" wrote to the Board of Governors and made a "covert threat" of adverse legislation against the Stock Exchange unless the wires of certain bucket shops were restored by the officials of the Exchange after they had been ripped out because the firms were suspected of having stolen the orders of customers.

When Mr. Cromwell came out of the Grand Jury room he was asked if he intended to give out a statement regarding the identity of the accused men.

"Apparently not," he replied, but added that when he reached the Stock Exchange there was a possibility that he might make a statement of some kind.

Mr. Pecora, Mr. Cromwell and the latter's lawyer then held a fifteen-minute conference in the Chief Assistant District Attorney's office, during which it was learned that Mr. Pecora had informed Mr. Cromwell that it would be necessary to obtain the testimony of three officials of the New York Stock Exchange who, it was said, had been mentioned by Mr. Cromwell in his testimony before the Grand Jury.

Mr. Cromwell, it was understood, told Mr. Pecora that it would not be necessary to issue subpoenas for them, and promised to have the three witnesses present in the Grand Jury chamber when the investigation is resumed at 10:30 o'clock this morning. Whether these witnesses were some of those who had signed the affidavits which Mr. Cromwell brought with him to the Grand Jury room could not be learned. There was a report that one of the witnesses is the Secretary of the Exchange, Jason Westerfield.

Mr. Pecora conferred with District Attorney Banton after the departure of Mr. Cromwell from the Criminal Courts Building, and later Mr. Banton said that he had issued specific orders that the names of the persons mentioned in the Grand Jury investigation were not to be made public until the Grand Jury had concluded its proceedings, if then.

"How long do you expect the Grand Jury investigation to last?" Mr. Pecora was asked in Mr. Banton's presence.

"It may be concluded tomorrow," he replied.

"Is there a possibility of your calling before the body the legislators or other officials against whom Mr. Cromwell directed his charges in his speech at Atlantic City?"

Awaits Additional Testimony.

"That all depends on the testimony of the witnesses that are to be examined tomorrow. In fact the calling of additional witnesses of any kind will depend on the testimony of those witnesses to be examined tomorrow."

"Did Mr. Cromwell say that he had with him the letter or letters he was alleged to have received from a 'high' official containing a covert threat against the Board of Governors of the Exchange or himself if the tickers of certain bucketshops were not restored?"

"He made no mention of letters," Mr. Pecora said. "If he had that intention in mind I suppose he laid it aside when I told him that I would arrange for his immediate appearance before the additional September Grand Jury."

"Did Mr. Cromwell say or intimate that he would make a statement to the public revealing the identity of the three legislators and other 'high' officials whom he accused in his speech at Atlantic City of having attempted to coerce the Exchange in letters into granting favors to bucket shops under threat of legislation aimed at the Stock Exchange?"

"We have no control over Mr. Cromwell's attitude in any way, shape or form, nor would not attempt to control his attitude if we could," Mr. Pecora answered.

"Did Mr. Cromwell or Mr. Battle tell you before Mr. Cromwell entered the Grand Jury room the nature of the statements contained in the affidavits Mr. Cromwell carried with him?"

"Neither Mr. Cromwell nor his lawyer said anything to me in that connection," he replied.

When District Attorney Banton came out of his chief assistant's office a few minutes before Mr. Cromwell and Mr. Pecora started for the Grand Jury room he was asked if the statement of the head of the Stock Exchange would be limited to the four particular instances of attempted coercion referred to by Mr. Cromwell in his speech at the American Bankers' Association convention.

"I want him to tell everything that he knows about anything indicating an attempt to violate the law," he replied.

A few minutes after the Grand Jury began its investigation Mr. Battle, pacing up and down the other room, refused to reveal whether he had advised Mr. Cromwell not to make a statement to the prosecutor, and added: "Mr. Cromwell merely is here in obedience to the Grand Jury subpoena. We have no controversy with District Attorney Banton." He also declared that Mr. Cromwell would not give out any statement regarding his testimony before the Grand Jury or any other matters connected with the investigation.

LINKS PRESIDENT WITH DRY POLITICS

Druggists' Spokesman Challenges Coolidge on Alleged Anti-Saloon League Offer.

ASSAILS HAYNES'S REGIME

Disregards Limits of Constitution, He Says—Narcotics Law Enforcement Also Criticized.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Sept. 26.—Asking whether President Coolidge was "playing politics" with prohibition enforcement, Eugene C. Brockmeyer of Washington, General Counsel for the National Association of Retail Druggists, attacked the administration of the Federal Prohibition Commissionr in an address to the druggists' convention today.

"The influence of the Anti-Saloon League is swaying men in public office, from the highest down," Mr. Brockmeyer said.

The speaker showed why the retail druggists of the country were opposed to Haynes but the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and the Secretary of the Treasury had their support.

"But we will be fair," he continued. "President Coolidge is a new man in the office. He has not had time to familiarize himself with many of the real conditions. He has been grossly imposed upon.

"If the present incumbent at the White House is playing politics, or intends to play politics, we want to know it. It has been said that the delegates from Ohio have been promised to him by the Anti-Saloon League in the next campaign on the pledge that he is going to appoint the present National Prohibition Commissioner in an address to prohibition laws contrary to the Constitution.

"We ask the co-operation of 50,000 retail druggists throughout the country. If you do your full duty, the public will understand what to do when it votes for President again.

"The Prohibition Commissioner," the speaker said, "has been enforcing what many persons term 'fanatical prohibition.'

"I credit the Commissioner with sincerity and honesty of purpose," he said; "with being well meaning and as having the support of a tremendous sentiment in the United States, but many people, like him, overlook the fact that there are limitations to the Constitution and, worse than that, they don't seem to care.

"Prohibition is not the only issue involved. The administration of the Harrison act is in the hands of a moral crusader who hasn't the remotest idea what it means, and cares less. Narcotic imports under international treaties have been reduced 33 per cent. on the basis of the medical needs of the American people. Why this added exercise of arbitrary power? The motive? For the purpose of claiming before the people the checking of narcotic drug addiction for political gain.

"If I had any criticism to make of the people of the United States it would be, first, that they are not holding Congress in check on its power as laid down in the Constitution, and second, they are not holding their administrators to the boundaries fixed by the law. Thus, there is trouble, and there is going to be more trouble, from the same reason."

Mr. Brockmeyer complained that a communication to President Coolidge of two weeks ago offering the assistance of the association on the problem had been turned over to Commissioner Haynes instead of to Secretary Mellon.

BOY SAVED FROM RIVER.

Police Grapple for Brother Said to Have Fallen In Also.

Michael Janowitz, 5½ years old, of 112 Broome Street, while playing about the bulkhead at Corlears Hook Park, under the Williamsburg Bridge, yesterday fell into the water and was rescued by George Underhill of 128 North Third Street, Brooklyn, a handy man on the barge Camp Huddleston, which is used as a nursery annex to Gouverneur Hospital. As soon as Michael had been taken to Gouverneur Hospital the police began dragging the waters around the bulkhead for his brother, John, 7½ years old, but no trace of him was found.

According to Michael, he and his brother had gone "fishing" for "killies." The big brother was leaning over the edge, Michael said, and Michael was holding his hand to keep him from slipping in when suddenly John saw some of the fish and, in trying to scoop them into a tin can, fell in and dragged Michael in with him. A number of persons saw Michael go into the water and shouted for help. Several declared they saw the 7½-year-old brother go into the water also.

Underhill has rescued three other boys and a woman from near the same point this year.

Effort to Prevent 1924 Nomination Charged by Alabama Legislator.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 26.—Representative J. Lee Long created excitement in the lower house of the Legislature today when he charged that Frederick I. Thompson, an Alabama newspaper publisher and member of the United States Shipping Board, is engaged in an effort to defeat Senator Underwood in his candidacy for the Democratic Presidential nomination.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Commenting today on the charge made in the Alabama House of Representatives by Representative Long that he was seeking to defeat Senator Underwood in his candidacy for the Democratic Presidential nomination, Frederick I. Thompson, a member of the Shipping Board, made this statement:

"Senator Underwood is the best judge of those most sincerely seeking to serve his Presidential ambitions; certainly not Mr. Long, whose opinions are without weight."

NEW YORK, THURSDAY, SEPT. 27, 1923.

DISORGANIZED LABOR.

There is no use in wasting harsh words on the strike of the New York pressmen. It was properly characterized by the International Pressmen's Union. Besides being a strike without notice and without demands made, and while there was good progress in peaceful negotiation, it was in clear violation of agreements between the local union, the International Union and the publishers, and was unauthorized and illegal under the rules of the union itself. The inevitable result was that the officers of the International Union revoked the charter of the New York pressmen. Thus a strike which was intended to establish the ruthless power of the local union led directly to its extinction.

No enemy of labor unions could have devised a heavier blow against them than the course followed by the New York pressmen. It was like an unprovoked declaration of war. If such rash action were to become common, it would take the heart out of collective bargaining. Instead of appealing to reason and fair adjustment, the men openly resorted to brute force, seeking to coerce the publishers by crippling without warning a business upon the orderly ongoing of which the livelihood of thousands of working people depends. The strike precipitated a contest which, if it were to be carried on in the spirit of the men who began it, would compel the publishers to meet force with force in the sense of calling up all their resources to avoid surrender to a mob tyranny.

For this was not a fight against organized labor. Labor never showed itself more disorganized than in the headlong and futile act of the New York pressmen. A small and noisy and reckless minority of them, eager to strike at any time with or without excuse, seized upon a routine meeting of the union, where it was not known, except to the plotters, that the question of a strike was to come up at all, and snatched a decision which was obviously against the judgment of the more sober-minded members. The vote to strike was had under circumstances of such passion and intimidation, was so manifestly unlawful from the first, and was so suicidal in effect, that it might seem as if craftily designed by enemies to bring the local organization of the pressmen into discredit and disrepute. This was not organized labor, but labor running amuck. If the unions are to take their management out of the hands of men able to look before and after, and turn them over to hot-heads always spoiling for a fight, they will not only lose the respect of the community, but will forfeit the advantages which organized labor has won for itself in the modern world. No one can deal with a union which itself deals treacherously.

The terms of the settlement agreed upon between the publishers and the International Pressmen's Union are a victory for reasonable methods, for peace in the industry, and for the adjudication of all possible future controversies in the fashion of civilized men. A board of conciliation is first to do its best to smooth out any difficulties that may arise, but if it is not successful the matters in dispute are to be referred to impartial arbitrators. By their decision both sides pledge themselves to abide. This is the establishment of a principle of the greatest benefit to workers, employers and the public alike. To have achieved this in the form of a contract between the International Pressmen's Union and the New York publishers, together with the entire repudiation and defeat of the wanton strike by the local union, is something in which all who have worked for that end, both the publishers and the officers of the International Union, may take legitimate pride. And the misguided strikers will themselves come in time to see that a great step in their true interest has been taken.

THE RUHR SETTLEMENT.

In finally deciding to decree abandonment of passive resistance in the Ruhr, Chancellor STRESEMANN has exhibited statesmanship of a high quality. Only by the greatest firmness and courage could he have brought the German people to admit the necessity of a surrender. He had to give up the policy of his predecessor. He had to announce the shattering of patriotic hopes. In a word, he had to face the hard realities and act in accordance with them. It may be that his bold and resolute course will make him so unpopular as to force him out of office before long. But in any event it is a satisfaction to know that Germany could produce in her acute crisis a man with fibre and strength enough to do what had to be done. It is to be hoped that, in the troublous times still ahead for the German Government, public men may come forward with such clear-eyed sagacity and heroic resolution as Chancellor STRESEMANN has displayed.

For the French Government the result is a brilliant vindication of the policy which it has pursued since last January. Sure that it had adopted the right means to its declared end, it has persisted in its course with admirable and unshaken calm. Now that it has won a complete victory in its main contention, the hour for moderation has come. There is good promise that French statesmanship, too, will rise to the emergency by making the occupation of the Ruhr from now on as nearly "invisible" as possible, and by taking up with Germany in a broad spirit the settlement of the big questions of reparations and security and beneficial trade between the two countries that remain to be settled. As for the English Government, after its vacillations and diplomatic defeats of the past two months, it should be in a chastened frame of mind prompting it to do its best in co-operating with France to bring about political and industrial peace in Central Europe.

JOHN MORLEY.

Not by the title he took when translated to the House of Lords, which he had assailed so stoutly and whose claws he was eager to cut, but as JOHN MORLEY will he be remembered—that pure and noble and disinterested figure, one of the last survivors of a famous company of statesmen that has passed into history. A philosophic radical, an agnostic in the party of "the Nonconformist conscience," a devotee to the last of the Cobdenite gospel, a man who meant to be just and was always tenacious of his principles, he was often classed as a doctrinaire, a solitary, too honest and unbending for politics, something less than a statesman.

Yet in two important respects time has vindicated his prevision and the statesmanship of his policies. The Irish Free State is a testimonial to the wisdom of his insistence for more than forty years on Home Rule and his steady sympathy with Irish nationalism. What extremity of alienation and division, what wounds that must be long in healing, if ever they are healed, what disasters whose effects Ireland must long suffer, might have been avoided if the Liberal Party could have been united in 1886! It will be recalled that JOHN MORLEY is supposed to have had a strong influence on Mr. GLADSTONE, persuading him to stick, in the Home Rule bill of that year, to the separation of the Irish from the British Parliament, a principle which both were forced by the prevailing sentiment of their party to abandon. Again, as Secretary of State for India, MORLEY was copiously howled at for his reconstruction of the Indian Government with a view to a larger development of the representative principle. For good or for ill, a wider recognition of that principle, a larger sop to Indian nationalism, is now being given.

Entering Parliament in middle life, MORLEY failed at first as a speaker. He began as a sort of essayist; and he never quite acquired "the House of Commons manner." He did become a direct, clear and forcible speaker, if not debater. He even came to more than hold his own on the platform; though these occasions of uproar and heckling were at first wormwood to his sensitive and fastidious spirit. He had not the graces or the voice of the orator; but he was heard with attention and respect because everybody knew that he was honest, that he meant to be fair, that no office could tempt him to give up his principles. His judgment was occasionally at fault. His preference of the accomplished but temperamental and feminine-fantastic Lord ROSEBERY over Sir WILLIAM HARCOURT was more than a little queer in spite of Sir WILLIAM's notorious rough tongue, and MORLEY had to join Sir WILLIAM in the Liberal broils that followed. His resignation from the Asquith Government in 1914 saddened many of his admirers. It seemed like a "great refusal." It could be explained only as a corollary of pacifism, an outgrowth of the "Liberalism of COBDEN." Yet the circumstances are still unknown. Doubtless MORLEY has left an explanation of them. It might be inferred from a remark of WINSTON CHURCHILL that MORLEY felt that younger men were needed, at least a unanimous Cabinet, to make a war Government successful.

Of his long, brilliant service as a writer for the press and an editor we need not speak; nor of his books, which a new generation is now beginning to read. His life was stainless. His character was of the loftiest. If British "sociocracy," the mongrel-named substitute for democracy, can produce men of his fibre, there need be no fear of its future. There was nothing sombre in his old-age vision. Only three months ago he was saying: "We can trust to the growth of re-"sponsibility; we may look for cir-"cumstances and events to teach their "lesson."

PATCHING AND TINKERING.

The State Architect has given notice that the time has come when patching and tinkering of the old wrecks of certain State hospital buildings will no longer serve a useful end, and that they are a menace to the lives of the unfortunates who are obliged to live in them. The responsibility of continued maintenance of these buildings is thus transferred to the people of the State. They have been asked to approve bonds in the amount of $50,000,000 to replace these obsolete "firetraps" with modern fireproof structures, and to provide against the overcrowding which is worse now than at any other time in the history of the State.

It is not quite fair to say, as Mr. FOLKS has said, that the thirty years of State care of the insane have been "thirty years of failure." They have seen an improvement over the years when many insane were kept in almshouses and poorhouses, but they have been years of shortcoming and compromising. As the State Architect says, the installation of standpipes and fire alarms cannot convert a "funeral pile" into a fireproof building. There must be new buildings, as free of fire hazards as they can be made. To put the entire burden upon the present taxpayers is neither practicable nor just. The issuance of bonds is the only way out. The people of the State ought to authorize this at the coming election in November, when the question will be submitted to popular vote. The fire at Ward's Island last February is a warning that must be heeded.

COMMUNISM IN BULGARIA.

Though the Communist revolt in Bulgaria has been exaggerated in dispatches from Paris, Belgrade and Saloniki, inference from such news as has been allowed to come through the censorship from Sofia indicates that it is serious. There seems to have been some fighting in the capital itself, which is heavily garrisoned; and through the country, though individual Communist risings are soon suppressed, it is admitted that they show unexpected recuperative power.

Premier TSANKOFF may be sincere in saying that Bulgaria is fighting the world's battle against the Third International. Doubtless the Russians have helped start the fire; though TCHITCHERIN, naturally, asserted some six weeks ago that the incriminating documents supposed to have been found in the possession of the Russian Red Cross Mission in Bulgaria had been planted there by the Tsankoff Government. Whatever the truth about this, in some parts of the country the peasants who supported the late Premier STAMBULISKY and his efforts to repress communism are siding with the Communists against the bourgeois bloc which overthrew him.

This endless chain of party strife goes back to 1915, when Bulgaria came into the war. Ex-Czar FERDINAND and ex-Premier RADOSLAVOFF are the men really responsible for the present revolution. They put Bulgaria into the war, and put STAMBULISKY, head of the pacifists, in jail. When Germany and Bulgaria lost the war STAMBULISKY came out of jail and locked up his political opponents. His persecution of the old party leaders and the city population that supported them provoked a reaction; STAMBULISKY was killed, DASKALOFF, second in command of the farmer party, was murdered in exile, and the other leaders were locked up. The natural consequence is the driving of many peasants into alliance with the Communists.

The Tsankoff Government has obtained permission to increase the army beyond the limit laid down in the Treaty of Neuilly. Of the 20,000 volunteers permitted by it, the Government has been unable to raise more than 7,000 or 8,000, a number obviously inadequate to the suppression of an extensive revolt. Yet the raising of a large army, vainly sought by Bulgarian Governments for years, will certainly rouse the suspicions of Bulgaria's neighbors. It was a privilege the Allies refused to the pro-Ally pacifist STAMBULISKY, but now, under pressure of the revolutionary danger, grant to a Government of much more questionable record. Though the party of RADOSLAVOFF has been forced out of the Coalition Ministry, there is a suspicion that the Government set up by last Summer's revolution is much under the influence of the army officers and the Macedonian irredentist refugees.

This explains the concentration of Serbian troops on the frontier. The Yugoslavs have no interest in a revolution in Bulgaria, but they have a strong interest in preventing an army raised to suppress that revolution from being used in support of Bulgaria's claim to Macedonia.

THE POLICE AT THEIR BEST.

The New York Police Department is far from perfect, but it can always be counted upon for efficient service in such troubles as the newspapers have been having for the past week. In a labor dispute of that kind the police do not take sides. They are absolutely impartial. But they resolutely do their duty to keep order, to prevent or punish violent assaults upon men engaged in lawful business, and to safeguard property threatened with injury or destruction. These were the animating purposes of the policemen detailed to the various newspaper offices, and they did their work beyond all praise. They were vigilant, foresighted, prepared for every emergency, and saw to it that full protection was given to the men printing and delivering newspapers. The whole was done with the finest organization and effectiveness. It was merely one proof more that the police force of this city, whatever its defects may be, is prompt and spirited in upholding the law in any crisis where the safety of life and property is endangered.

ROBBING PETER TO PAY PAUL.

The Secretary of Agriculture proposes a reduction "of at least 25 per "cent. in freight rates, especially on "agricultural products intended for "export." The Interstate Commerce Commission is discussing the lowering of freight rates, particularly on wheat and flour. All this is politicians' political economy. The Southwestern miller calls for a 50 per cent. reduction in the freight rates on wheat.

Mr. C. E. SPENS, Vice President of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, is one of the officials whose opinion of this modest request was asked. He makes a very instructive reply. If wheat rates are to be reduced, all grain rates will have to be reduced. Producers of corn, barley and so on aren't going to become heavenly minded altruists all at once. The revenues of the great grain-carrying roads would shrink enormously. Secretary WALLACE says that we are to be "on a permanently higher scale of industrial wages." The railroads are to pay high wages out of a purse depleted for the supposed benefit of the farmers. Mr. SPENS points out that the Interstate Commerce Commission on Jan. 1, 1922, reduced the rates on domestic wheat and its products about 13 per cent.; those on coarse grain and its products about 21 per cent., and that the present export rate from the Missouri River to the Atlantic seaboard is but 2 per cent. a hundredweight higher than before the advance established in 1920.

The carriers voluntarily reduced the export rate on wheat from Kansas City to Baltimore from 52 to 38½ cents a hundredweight, from Kansas City to the Gulf from 38 to 30½ cents. A forced reduction further will injure the railroads; and the price of wheat will continue to be fixed by the law of supply and demand, not by regulation of railway rates. You can fix the rates, but the price of wheat will fluctuate as it has fluctuated. In 1922 the price of cash wheat in Chicago varied as much as 51½ cents a bushel. In the first six months of 1923 the fluctuation was 25¾ cents. Meanwhile, the earnings of the Burlington road on wheat were 10 cents a bushel.

Why does the farmer always lay his troubles to the railroads? Mr. SPENS states that the cost of thrashing a bushel of wheat in the vicinity of the Kansas towns of Norton and Ludell is from 12 to 15 cents a bushel. His railroad hauls the wheat from Norton to Kansas City, 373 miles, for 12 cents a bushel, from Ludell to Kansas City, 432 miles, for 13 cents a bushel. "Is "not the trouble with the wheat in-"dustry as a whole," asks Mr. SPENS, "that the margin between operating "costs and revenue is too narrow? "This is the situation with the rail-"way industry as a whole." Some politicians seem ready to gamble for votes on the chance of improving one situation by worsening the other.

The opportunity for amiable jesting over the sacrifice of the editorial page by the New York newspapers, during their past week of stress, was too good to be lost. Now, it was said, we have the true measure of value as between news and opinion. With the house on fire, it was seen what furnishings the owner thought best worth saving. There was a fine line of facetious comment of this order. But the sober fact is that with joint publication of the news, forced by the strike, there could not be separate editorial utterance. Fancy a reader finding a World editorial under a Tribune head! The very need of preserving the independence of the editorial page compelled its temporary elimination.

A Special Law for Islands.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There would seem to be room for another international law (another American doctrine), and that is where foreign nations own islands close to the shores of another nation they shall be in duty bound to see that their nationals therefrom do not actively engage in the violation of the laws of the neighboring power.

Is it wise for the nations of Europe to presume too far on the patience and good-will of the United States with reference to the violation by their nationals of our prohibition laws?

LOWDEN OPPOSES FEDERAL BOARDS

Former Illinois Governor Declares All Executive Functions Should Be Centralized.

URGES RESPONSIBLE HEADS

National Tax Association Opens Warm Contest on Question of State Taxation of Banks.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Sept. 26.—Centralization of all executive functions of the Federal Government within designated departments was advocated by former Governor Lowden of Illinois in an address here today before the National Tax Association as a means of lessening the tax burden and of eliminating "the deadly inertia" of boards and commissions.

Mr. Lowden deprecated the growth of boards and commissions, declaring that they worked to bring about unnecessary expenditures and enabled officials sitting upon them to evade responsibility for their acts.

"It is said that there are ten departments of Government at Washington," be asserted. "In act, there are many times ten independent and practically unrelated agencies of Government there. No department under these circumstances can avoid becoming rigid and lawbound, and red tape necessarily becomes the rule. If, instead, the department heads were authorized to prescribe the duties of subordinates, the red tape would largely disappear, and the responsible head would have power commensurate with his responsibility. Instead of an inert mass, you would have a living organism with an actual head.

"There are now something more than forty independent establishments of government within no department of government and answerable directly to the President. It is obvious that the President can have no knowledge of, much less exercise supervision over, these independent agencies of government.

"There should not be a single function pertaining to administration which does not come directly under some Cabinet official. The President, with his multifarious duties pressing upon him, cannot be safely depended upon to properly direct any administrative activity unless the initiative comes from the head of a department."

The growth in the lack of law enforcement was attributed by Mr. Lowden as partly the result of an increase in the commission form of government, and be held that "good and efficient public service makes it mandatory that responsibility be fixed definitely."

One of the most hotly contested questions before the conference came to the fore today with the address of J. Vaughan Gary, counsel for the State Tax Board of Virginia, on State taxation of banks.

Mr. Gary's discussion was based on a first-hand knowledge of the Federal Court case of the Merchants National Bank, decided about a year ago in Richmond, Va., under which several States have been faced with the necessity of returning to national banks large sums collected under income taxes.

Discussion of the matter in connection with the address was but a prelude to a fight to be waged on a resolution introduced by Samuel Lord, Chairman of the Minnesota Tax Commission, which would declare that Congress should pass an act along the lines of the Kellogg bill, defeated at the last session, to remedy the situation brought about by the Richmond decision.

SAYS WE ALARMED LATINS.

Bishop Thirdield Calls Naval Mission to Brazil a Blunder.

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Sept. 26.—Bishop W. P. Thirkield of Mexico City and Peru, speaking at the Northwestern Indiana Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church here today, declared that the appointment of the large United States naval commission to Brazil was a far-reaching diplomatic blunder, which helped to defeat the aims of the Santiago Pan-American Conference and now threatened the peace among South American republics.

Bishop Thirkield said that the recent Pan-American Conference, while not a failure, did not achieve its chief goal in securing the limitation of armament and a permanent program of peace and good-will throughout the American continent.

Brazilian contact with the naval commission, Bishop Thirkield said, stirred the military ambitions of the youth of Brazil and encouraged an enlarged naval program, which has awakened distrust and jealousy among neighboring republics. A spirit of resentment against the United States for making assignment of such a commission was promptly evident, the Bishop said.

He cited preparations in Argentina and Uruguay, which he said have been the result of the situation in Brazil.

SPAIN CUTS DOWN NEWS.

Only Official Statements May Be Published on Political Topics.

MADRID, Sept. 26.—New censorship provisions have been put into effect prohibiting the publication of any reports bearing on the plans of the Military Directory, except upon the authority of the President of the Directory, General Primo Rivera, the members of the Directory or the official in charge of giving information to the press. The measure, it is announced, is for the purpose of preventing the spread of alarm through false reports.

The Governor of Madrid has informed the Military Directorate that he will suppress any attempt by the tradesmen to increase prices of necessities which he says must be based upon the earnings of the working people. He will compel the storekeepers to make sworn statements as to the prices of their goods.

The newspaper La Voz says:

"The diplomatic dispatches affirm that Great Britain is trying to postpone anew the Tangier conference at London with the object of giving Spain time to accomplish the subjugation of the Moroccan rebels. When this is effected an agreement on the controversy is believed certain."

DAHLIA EXHIBITION OPENS.

There is a large variety of blossoms, excellent in quality and brilliant in color in the eighth annual exhibition of the American Dahlia Society, which opened on the roof of the Hotel Pennsylvania last evening and will continue through the week.

The "Jersey's Beauty," grown at the Edward Dean Adams place at Rumson, N. J., by its originator, William H. Waite, and shown by the Sheepers Company, won a first prize and a gold medal.

Among trade exhibitors are J. W. Smith, West Collingwood, N. J.; E. W. Darling, New Bedford, the Babylon Dahlia Gardens; Stuart & Fischer, and W. A. Burpee, Philadelphia.

J., and Lucille Bonert were other exhibitors. Edward Dean Adams took a first for the largest yellow cactus dahlia.

PROFIT IN NATIONAL PARKS.

Officially Estimated to Be $100,000,000 for States.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Financial returns of the National Park system during the season now closing to the States in which the reservations are situated were estimated today by the Interior Department at $100,000,000. This total, it was said, does not include consideration of indirect profits due to retention of funds which otherwise would be spent outside the State and to health and other benefits.

More than $6,000,000 was spent in and near Yellowstone Park by tourists, while Glacier Park is credited with having brought $1,250,000 of "travel money" into Montana and Mount Rainier Park $1,500,000 into Washington. Crater Lake was described as a $7,000,000 asset to Oregon with an indicated annual return of 4 per cent. on its valuation.

Yosemite brought $5,000,000 to California in addition to the unestimated value of the pure water supply insured by its vast watershed, and the Sequoia and General Grant Parks added $1,000,000.

Visitors to Rocky Mountain National Park, Colorado, numbered 65,000, their stay in the State averaged ten days and their daily expenditure was estimated at $8 each. To the total of $5,200,000 thus spent by visitors to Rocky Mountain Park was added $2,500,000 spent by residents of the State in travel to and recreation in the park.

Tourists were estimated by civic organizations in Denver to have carried $40,000,000 into Colorado, where Mesa Verde National Park is situated, and Grand Canyon National Park was credited with bringing $2,000,000 into Arizona.

MAY TAKE COLORADO RIVER.

Federal Power Board Considering Control of Its Development.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Proposals that the Federal Government take over development of the Cororado River as a necessary adjunct to control the periodic floods of that waterway is receiving serious consideration by members of the Federal Power Commission.

The problem of the Colorado, presented anew to the commission as a result of the refusal of Arizona to ratify the compact authorized by Congress between the seven States interested in the river's basin, has brought to light so many conflicting angles, it was explained today, that Federal control is viewed as the logical solution.

The pending application of an Arizona corporation for a license covering a power project at Diamond Creek, in Colorado Canyon, was cited as one of the complications. Members of the commission contend that, since this applicant has complied with all requirements, it holds a "moral lien" to the site, but, on the other hand, they are convinced that issuance of the license inevitably would injure the interests of other States along the river.

The scope of the project as filed with the commission would entail the use of an inordinate proportion of the river flow, according to witnesses at the recent hearing, and its operation would "take the cream off the power market," from which the future development costs would have to be met.

Responsibility of the Federal Government for protecting the public against floods to the extent of its power was said to be the basis on which the commission would consider the main question.

CADETS START A MAGAZINE.

The Pointer, at Army School, Both Serious and Humorous.

West Point cadets have a new magazine. The Pointer, a semi-monthly, was brought out for the first time Sept. 1, with forewords by General Pershing, Brigadier General Fred W. Sladen, Superintendent, and others. D. P. Page Jr., as editor-in-chief, heads an editorial board of nineteen cadets. The Pointer contains material both serious and whimsical. It has twenty-four pages and is attractive in style and make-up.

General Pershing contributed a retrospect of "the changes which have occurred in this country since my cadet days," in the course of which he observed:

"Heretofore requirements of service have forced the army officer to spend a large portion of his career out of touch with the everyday life of the American citizen. Today, however, the officer finds his principal mission to be the instruction and guidance of those patriotic fellow-citizens who volunteer their services for the national defense. His most important tasks lie in the lecture halls, the armories, the schools, the colleges and the Summer training camps."

FAUNCE ASSAILS CLIQUES.

President of Brown University Urges "Unity Work and Loyalty."

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 26.—"Cliques can have no place in genuine democracy," President William H. P. Faunce of Brown told the faculty and students body this morning at the opening of the 160th college year. "College men should show the world that all their smaller loyalties are swallowed up in one great loyalty to the college itself—that is true preparation for citizenship," he added.

"We hear of the farmers' bloc, and the labor bloc and the railroad bloc—until one would like to ask: 'where is the American bloc?' he continued.

"Above our little group of friends always rises our college, and above our college our country. That is the spirit that makes an institution or a nation. Unity, work, loyalty—these are the three indispensable elements of college life."

Although registration figures are not complete it is expected that the total number of students will be about the same as last year—1,200.

ACCUSE BARGE CANAL FOES.

Speakers Tell State Conference Its Safeguards Have Been "Ripped."

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 26.—The $170,000,000 barge canal is threatened by insidious forces seeking to make it merely a waterpower reservoir and to curb its competition with other carriers, George Clinton Sr. of Buffalo, grandson of De Witt Clinton, charged in his opening speech at the New York State Barge Canal conference here today.

The Walker act, in removing from the hands of the Superintendent of Public Works the supervision and maintenance of the canal system of the State, is unconstitutional, Frank Gardner, Secretary of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation, charged in a speech to the Resolutions Committee.

The legal safeguards of the canal system have been ripped by successive acts of Republican and Democratic Legislatures, according to both speakers.

U. of P. Gift From J. D. Rockefeller Jr. Is for Public Patients.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26.—Provost Josiah H. Penniman of the University of Pennsylvania announced today that John D. Rockefeller Jr. had given to the university $10,000 to treat with insulin a larger number of public ward and dispensary patients suffering from diabetes and to teach physicians in general practice the proper method of employing insulin in the treatment of the disease.

Since the announcement of the discovery of insulin the medical staff of the university hospital has been studying its use and has had under its care a limited number of patients.

Arrangements are being made to give instruction to physicians, and announcement of the courses will soon be made.

DR. BUTLER ATTACKS NEW PRUSSIANISM

Today's Nationalism, He Says at Columbia's Opening, Is Same Evil We Fought in 1918.

PLEA FOR CULTURAL IDEALS

Dr. Dewey Warns Against Rule of Practicality—New York University Begins Its Year.

President Nicholas Murray Butler, in his annual address at the opening exercises of Columbia University yesterday, assailed present-day nationalism and the current doctrine that a nation is an end in itself as "simply the pure Prussianism against which nations that called themselves liberty-loving were in arms five years ago."

While all Governments gravely profess their devotion to peace, said Dr. Butler, they do not feel that the time has come yet to do anything about it. The question of whether mankind can learn by experience was the topic of President Butler's address.

The 170th academic year of Columbia University opened at 3 a. m. yesterday with traditional ceremonies in the Columbia gymnasium. The auditorium was filled with 2,500 students and faculty mebers. John Dewey, L.L.D., professor of philosophy, delivered the annual academic address, discussing the topic of "Culture and Professionalism in Education," and Chaplain Raymond C. Pnox of the University delivered the prayer and benediction.

Classes in all departments of the university begin today. It was estimated that the enrolment this year would exceed 30,000. Applications for admission have greatly exceeded facilities in several departments, notably Columbia College and the College of Physicians and Surgeons.

An appeal to workers in both the professional and the non-professional fields to co-operate in "fostering in every department of the university an interest in inquiry and liberal discussion and love of scientific thinking, that if of free and disinterested thinking," was made by Professor Dewey. Professor Dewey pointed out the danger in the tendency of unuiversities to multiply schools preparing "for what is called practical life," and declared that no social class is at present predestined to play the major rôle in politics and in social management.

"Disinterested love of inquiry and idealistic devotion to the things of the mind in science and art are not flourishing in our high schools, colleges and universities as are the studies that prepare us for what is called the practical life," he asserted.

President Butler in his address, dwelling on the reluctance of mankind in the mass to learn from experience, said:

"What is the explanation of the constant trying all over again, in the name of progress, of those forms of folly, of wrong and of oppression which the scholar well knows have long since been demonstrated to be futile as aids in the development of the life of men?

"The great war through which the world has only just now passed was hailed on every hand as the greatest teacher that mankind had had in centuries. From this teacher we were to learn the lessons of the impotence and wrong of national egotism and national self-aggrandizement. The existing state of armed peace, interrupted by occasional wars, was to give way toformal co-operation between the nations to maintain the peace of the world and to advance its civilization by multiplying the comforts and satisfactions of men. He would be a hardy observer who today, less than five years after the armistice, would assert that any of these ends is being even measurably attained.

"The statute-books are being loaded down with mere expressions of opinion in the form of laws, usually criminal laws, and then surprise is expressed that these expressions of opinion in the form of laws are not obeyed as are those laws which rest upon the sound foundation offered by human experience and which are supported by a substantially unanimous judgment.

"Can men learn? is a question that will bear some pondering. In particular, it would be interesting to get light upon the question why it is if individual men can and do learn that men in groups, societies, nations, show so few signs of being able to learn."

Exercises at the Columbia Medical School were held in the lower lecture room in Fifty-ninth Street yesterday at 10 A. M. Dr. Thomas W. Salmon, Professor of Psychiatry, spoke on "Mind and Medicine."

The College of Arts and Pure Science and the College of Engineering of New York University officially opened their ninety-third year yesterday with the annual welcome of the Dean to the incoming freshman class. Professor Perley L. Thorne of the Department of Mathematics, acting as Dean of the College of Arts in place of Dean Archibald L. Bouten, who is on a year's leave, greeted the class of 1927 at the traditional opening day ceremonies in the Gould Memorial Library Chapel. Dr. Marshall S. Brown, Dean of the Faculties, delivered the principal address. Dr. George Alexander, President of the University Council, and acting Chancellor of the University in the absence of Dr. Elmer Ellsworth Brown, also spoke. The founding of a combined department of classics, which will be headed by Professor Ralph Van D. Magoffin, was announced together with that of the new department of music under the direction of Assistant Professor Albert Stoessel, and the new department of Fine Arts.

CAN END COAST POLLUTION.

Bureau of Mines Will Offer Remedies to a World Parley.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Pollution of river and coastal waters by leaking and refuse oils, with consequent injury to shipping and riparian property, can be virtually eliminated, in the opinion of the Bureau of Mines.

This decision was announced today, based on the preliminary report of a special committee which has been working on the problem for more than a year in response to legislation enacted by Congress. Invitations for an international conference on control of oil pollution will be sent out by the State Department under authority of the same congressional resolution, as soon as the committee has rendered its final report.

Remedies suggested by the committee include control of waste from streamside industrial plants, installation of devices on ships to prevent egress of oil waste, and provision of barges or other receptacles in harbors for receipt of necessary refuse.

K. OF C. TO MEET MASONS.

WOONSOCKET, R. I., Sept. 26.—The Woonsocket Masonic Club and Woonsocket Knights of Columbus will meet on Oct. 23 in a social session, according to announcement issued by both organizations here today. Plans are being made on a large scale for the gathering, which is unique in this city, and some of the most prominent men in the respective organizations are scheduled to address the meeting.

The project originated with the Masonic Club and the invitation extended to the local Knights was enthusiastically accepted at the meeting of the council.

Co-operation on common grounds and greater social intercourse between the two organizations are the purposes of the gathering.

SAYS EGGS PROVE OLD IDEA.

Prof. Scott of Princeton Comments on the Dinosaur Discovery.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, Sept. 26.—"This immensely sensational discovery confirms the beliefs which scientists have read for some years," declared Professor William B. Scott Blair, Professor of Geology in Princeton university, today concerning the discovery by the Asiatic expedition of the American Museum of Natural History of twenty-five dinosaur eggs. Dr. Scott declared that, while it was considered probable that these ancient reptiles were oviparous, it had never been expected to find the eggs intact.

"Scientists have thought for years that Central Asia must contain evidences of the life of higher groups. But they also thought there was no hope of discovering such quantities of specimens as have now been gathered," said Professor Scott, who was a classmate of Dr. Henry Fairfield Osborn, paleontologist with the third Asiatic expedition, at Princeton in 1877. "The whole work of this remarkable discovery is in direct confirmation of the beliefs of the past, for as a rule ninety-nine shells out of a hundred reptiles are egg-laying animals."

Dr. Scott was particularly interested to learn more concerning the exact nature of the eggs found and the conditions under which the nests were built and preserved, for he explained that usually eggs of this type of reptile have shells of a leathery consistency rather than the hard, brittle shells of other eggs. But to be so perfectly preserved he thought these dinosaur eggs must be of the hard-shelled sort. He further pointed out that the crocodile, to which the dinosaur is in many ways closely related, has eggs of the hard-shelled character.

It is also probable that, like most reptiles, the dinosaur had nothing to do with the hatching of the eggs, Professor Scott declared, other than placing them in favorable conditions for incubation, since the spectacle of one of these huge lizards, weighing many tons, sitting on a nest, however firmly constructed, is hardly possible.

TARAFA BILL IS ADOPTED.

Rail Merger Measure Now Goes to Zayas for Final Action.

HAVANA, Sept. 25 (Associated Press).—The railroad and port measure, known as the Tarafa bill, finally passed the House tonight. The vote was 92 to 7.

The House had concurred in the Senate amendments to the original bill, and the measure now goes to President Zayas for action.

The Tarafa bill was designed to consolidate the Cuban railroads and to provide for the establishment of national ports. As passed by the House originally it was considered to contain provisions which were declared to be monopolistic and confiscatory. These were removed in Senate committee.

As amended by the Senate the bill provided that after the proposed holding company had started consolidation of the railroads the lines affected should institute a 20 per cent. rate reduction on the base charge for carrying sugar more than 125 kilometers, and also make a 30 per cent. cut in their charges for transporting the mails.

Sugar companies and other industries were authorized under the amended bill to continue the operation of private ports as in the fiscal year of 1922-1923.

WILL RESTORE WAYSIDE INN.

Henry Ford Will Oeprate It Both as Museum and Tavern.

SUDBURY, Mass., Sept. 26.—"I intend to restore the Wayside Inn as nearly to its original condition as possible and then to operate it both as a museum and as a tavern," Henry Ford said today. The manufacturer recently purchased the tavern made famous by Longfellow.

"I take a very deep interest in this building," he said, "and I bought it with the purpose of making a shrine for the people of the United States. It is richer in colonial, historic and literary interest than any similar structure that I know of."

Mr. Ford said that he contemplated few changes. One room, he said, would be named the Edison Room.

The old sign which announces an admission charge of 25 cents from all visitors will remain, Mr. Ford added, remarking:

"If people have interest enough to want to see the place, they will not object to paying. Anything free is not worth having."

BATTLESHIP MEN TESTIFY.

Last of the Arkansas Witnesses Heard in Collision Inquiry.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 26.—Taking of testimony of witnesses from the battleship Arkansas in the court of inquiry investigating the ramming of the destroyer McFarland by the Arkansas off Cape Cod on Sept. 19 was completed today, with the exception of that of Captain Ridley McLean, commanding officer, and it is not certain that he is to be a witness.

The witnesses today included Lieutenant A. J. Welling, officer on watch at the time in the engine room; Chief Quartermaster Ray Everett Hamilton, who had the wheel, and Lieut. Commander W. B. Philips.

The first witness called for the McFarland was Lieutenant Herbert Finebaum, navigating officer, but he gave no details as to the McFarland having been manoeuvring to get out of the way of the Bainbridge, which he intimated was the fact while testifying yesterday.

DE LA HUERTA A CANDIDATE.

Agrees to Run for President—Other Cabinet Changes Expected.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 26.—Adolfo de la Huerta, whose resignation as Secretary of the Treasury has been accepted by President Obregon, has assured a delegation representing the Co-operatista Party in the Chamber of Deputies that his retirement has altered the circumstances and made it possible for him to reconsider his determination not to become a candidate for the Presidency.

It was reported last evening that de la Huerta had promised to accept the nomination should the Co-operatista convention vote decisively in his favor and should it become evident that the public supported such a step.

Vacancies in the Interior and Treasury posts, together with the possibility that several other Cabinet members, including the Ministers of Commerce, Industry, War and Public Instruction, will resign, are expected to result soon in the complete reorganization of President Obregon's official family.

SAYS BRAZIL ASKED JENKS.

But New York Professor Denies Taking Up Her Financial Problem.

RIO JANEIRO, Sept. 26.—The newspaper Anacao says there is a persistent report in business circles here that the Brazilian Government has invited Professor Jeremiah V. Jenks of New York University "to study and report on Brazil's difficult financial situation.

"According to information from important business houses in Rio Janeiro," the article continues, "the invitation, sent through the American Embassy, was accepted by Professor Jenks after consultation with the American State Department. It is further reported that he sailed for Rio Janeiro from New York on the steamer Vauban on Sept. 22."

Professor Jenks was out of town yesterday. Through his Secretary he denied that he had any intention of going to Brazil, or that he had been asked to inquire into the financial situation of that country.

JOHN D. GOT A JOB JUST 68 YEARS AGO

"What if I Had Missed It?" He Asks, Recalling Promise of Work on Farm.

HAS A FAMILY REUNION

Plays Nine Holes of Golf and Almost Equals His Usual 42 or 43.

Special to The New York Times.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Clouds and mist hovered over Pocantico Hills today, but there was sunshine in the house, for this was the sixty-eighth anniversary of the day when John D. Rockefeller got his first job, the day he celebrates with more joy than any other in the year. He was up early as usual and greeted the members of his household in high spirits.

"The day I got my first regular employment," he said. "What if I had missed it? How many times I have thought of that; for the three years and a half of business training I had in that commission house formed a large part of the foundation of my business career. My father had said he would take care of me; would put me on a farm. How much I should have missed. Do you wonder that I tramped the streets of Cleveland for six weeks in sultry weather. I never thought of obstacles. I was bound to find my chance."

So the flag flew high on the terrace south of the great gray stone house and there was an air of holiday everywhere on the estate. Mr. Rockefeller devoted his regular daily hour after breakfast to work with his secretary upon correspondence concerning the various benevolent organizations he has founded.

Promptly at 10 o'clock he marched to the first tee and sent a new white golf ball flying down the middle of the fairway toward the first green. He was on the green in three, played the conventional two putts and scored a five.

Although past 84 years, Mr. Rockefeller's step was as steady and his stroke as hard as if he were only 60. He has been doing this nine holes at Pocantico in 42 and 43 of late and today's game was almost up to standard, though it might have been better if his friends in the foursome had developed a greater gift of silence.

A few friends joined Mr. Rockefeller at luncheon and in a drive over the Westchester hills in the afternoon. There was a family reunion at dinner in which Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller Jr. participated. In response to their congratulations, Mr. Rockefeller said he could not remember when he ever had felt better. On this anniversary day he followed faithfully the plan he began half a century ago of giving a fair division of the twenty-four hours among work, play and recreation, not forgetting the regular half hour of sleep after luncheon.

OPENS PALESTINE DRIVE.

Sir Alfred Mond Appeals for Restoration Fund Contributions.

Sir Alfred Mond, former member of the British Cabinet and member of Parliament, was welcomed by a capacity audience last night at the Town Hall, where he opened his campaign for the Palestine Restoration Fund.

"The prestige of the Jewish race throughout the world," said Sir Alfred, "is involved in the Palestine question. The British Government expects every Jew to avail himself of the opportunity presented to make Palestine a national Jewish home."

Samuel Untermyer welcomed the guest of honor. He said that as creator and head of the British Economic Board for Palestine Sir Alfred had made a great contribution to the upbuilding of the land of Israel. Other speakers were Louis Marshall and Oscar Straus.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 26.—A "Slumberland Afghan," a covering for an infant, knit by Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, attracted much attention this afternoon in the exhibition of the handknit garments which won the $11,000 in cash prizes in the national knitting contest.

The Afghan was worn by Robert Johnson Jr., 9 months old, of Atlantic City, and after the exhibition was sent back to the White House by special messenger, where, it was declared, it would be kept for the President's first grandchild.

SEEK A LOAN ON "FAITH."

Detroit Wants $5,000,000 Here, but Cannot Issue Bonds.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 26.—Controller William J. Nagel will go to New York next week, he announced today, to negotiate a loan for the Department of Street Railways. The money, if available, he states, will be borrowed on the "faith and credit" of the City of Detroit, and not on any contemplated bond issue.

Eastern bond markets, the natural market in which municipal bonds are generally sold, are closed to Detroit bond issues in the immediate future, Mr. Nagel says. But a loan is needed for the furtherance of street railway extensions and improvements, as contemplated for the Department of Street Railways under the $5,000,000 bond issue approved by the electors on April 2, but for which the city now finds it has an insufficient bond margin to issue the securities.

SARAZEN TO MEET BARNES AT PELHAM

Champion and Former Titleholder Advance in Pro Golf and Will Clash Today.

CRUICKSHANK HAS TROUBLE

The seeded stars in the 1923 P. G. A. championship, which is being fought out on the links of the Pelham Country Club course at Pelham Manor, N. Y., were victorious in yesterday's matches, but today will tell another story, for several of these first-flight players are due to meet one another. Every match on today's schedule promises to be a battle to the finish with the clash between Gene Sarazen of Briarcliff, the defending champion, and Long Jim Barnes of Pelham, a two-time holder of the title, topping the card. Sarazen, for whom golf championships were mere trifles a year ago, has been stripped of one title after another until he is now defending his last remaining crown. Barnes has not held a title since he surrendered his 1921 open championship to Sarazen a year ago at Skokie, so today's encounter promises to be something more than a golf match.

In the same half of the draw Robert Cruickshank of Shackamaxon, who might now be the open champion had it not been for Bobby Jones's superb iron shot to the green in the play-off at Inwood, will meet Willie Macfarlane, Oak Ridge pro, who has been going along great guns this season and one of the "dark horses" in this year's P. G. A. event.

The other two matches will bring together Freddie McLeod of Washington, former national open champion, and Walter Hagen and George McLean of Grassy Sprain, Shawnee and Westchester open titleholder, and Joe Kirkwood, the Australian.

Barnes, continuing his policy of ending his matches as early as possible, defeated Cyril Walker of Englewood by 8 and 6, a figure that was second in point of brevity only to Macfarlane's 9 and 8 elimination of Jack Stait, Hartford pro. Hagen piled up a four-hole lead on Johnny Golden of Dutchess in the morning round and held on in the afternoon session, winning 4 and 3.

Cruickshank Hard Pressed.

All the other matches were nip and tuck affairs. Cruickshank, trailing Ray Derr of Lulu Temple, Philadelphia, until the last quarter, won out on the last hole, 1 up. McLeod clinched his match with Clarence Hackney of Atlantic City, holder of the Canadian and Philadelphia open titles, and Kirkwood stopped Johnny Farrell, young Quaker Ridge pro, on the finishing green.

Sarazen was given a scare by Alex Campbell of Cincinnati, Ohio, but won out by 3 and 2, and George McLean of Grassy Sprain, the Shawnee and Westchester County open champion, and Willie Ogg of Worcester, Mass., recent winner of the Maine open championship, went extra holes after one of the greatest battles of the day, McLean winning 1 up on the thirty-eighth green.

For the greater part of the Kirkwood-Farrell match, the local pro looked like a rather easy winner. He was three up on the Australian trick shot star at the end of eighteen holes. Then, to start the afternoon round, Kirkwood reeled off three birdies in four holes, a 4 at the first, a spectacular 3 at the second and a deuce at the fourth.

Farrell, after the second shots had been played to the first hole, took three to hole out while Kirkwood chipped up and holed out. At the next hole he played a weird slice off the course, leaving him a blind shot to the green, out of the rough. He pitched over the intervening hill almost into the cup, his ball stopping only a few inches from the hole.

Farrell was still 1 up going to the ninth, but missed a short putt for a half, giving Kirkwood a hole which should not have been his, although he played a great approach shot around a tree to the green. Kirkwood, dormie 2 going to the seventeenth, lost the hole to Farrell, 5 and 4.

Kirkwood Makes Tricky Putt.

Johnny put his drive on the green at the home hole, and Kirkwood followed suit with a shot that caught the bank and rolled down to within two yards of the cup. After Farrell had overrun eight feet, he holed coming back, but Kirkwood got down a tricky putt for his half, giving him the match.

McLean proved his ability as a match player hard to down when he came from five holes behind at the end of the morning round to defeat Ogg on the thirty-eighth green. George squared the match by winning the tenth, eleventh and twelfth in a row, and from then on it was a fight to the finish. The play at the home hole was a true test of nerves. Ogg was just off the edge of the green from the tee, while McLean was almost out on the adjoining fairway, with a cluster of trees to carry, and a difficult green to hold in case he was successful. His effort was short, still in the rough, while his third went over the green and into a gravel path. Now playing three while Ogg was still to play his second, McLean pitched his ball through the trees to within five feet of the cup, and holed the putt, while Ogg took 3 to hole out, leaving the Grassy Sprain star with still a chance left. McLean then won out two holes later.

McLeod's wonderful mashie play and putting were responsible for his victory over Hackney. Freddie trailed his chubby rival by two holes at the end of the morning round, but forged one hole in the lead at the turn in the afternoon. Hackney then got the eleventh and twelfth, but McLeod won the next, and then two more in succession. At the fourteenth, after topping his second, he played a pitch through the trees stone dead for a 4, and at the next he laid a spoon shot within twelve feet of the pin and holed the putt for a 3. Dormie 2 going to the seventeenth, the Washington pro topped his drive, losing the hole, but he got his half at the home hole.

U. S. Golf Association to Bar Slotted or Punched Clubs

The United States Golf Association announced yesterday that after Jan. 1, 1924, all slotted or punched clubs would be barred. Stamped lines may be used if they do not exceed one-sixteenth of an inch in width and are not less than three thirty-seconds of an inch apart. All rough or raised edges must also be removed. Clubs with slotted and punched faces, which are used to put an abnormal "cut" on a ball, were barred more than a year ago by the golfing authorities of Great Britain. Discussion on the subject was hot during last Summer when Americans playing in tournaments in England were forbidden to use anything but smooth clubs.

KNOBBIE IS WINNER ON AQUEDUCT TRACK

Rancocas Horse Comes Again to Beat Miss Star in the Arverne Handicap.

Coming back into the lead in the last few strides after having been apparently beaten, the Rancocas Stable's five-year-old horse Knobbie made a great finish to win the Arverne Handicap at the Aqueduct track yesterday afternoon, beating the Riviera Stable's Miss Star by a length and a half in the very fast time of 1:11 4-5 for the six-furlong sprint. George D. Widener's Last Straw was third. L. Fator rode the winner, which earned $3,175 for his stable. He carried 123 pounds and was the favorite.

Happy Thoughts, the $75,000 filly which E. F. Simms bought from W. V. Thraves at Saratoga, was the practically prohibitive favorite in the Holly Purse, a five-furlong dash for two-year-old fillies. Six went to the post in the chute, with Happy Thoughts in the outside position, where she could keep clear of interference. As in all her races, the brown daughter of Sir Martin completely dominated her opposition, breaking with all her usual speed and immediately drawing away. Schuttinger held her in strong restraint all the way and she won with the greatest ease in 0:58 4-5, beating J. E. Widener's Negrina by two lengths at the finish. The latter won second money by a neck from W. B. Miller's Pond Lily.

DONOGHUE RELEASED TO RIDE PAPYRUS

ZEV GALLOPS 1 1-8 MILES

Radiogram Reports Papyrus Eating Well on Aquitania—Elaborate Landing at Pier.

A cablegram was received yesterday by the Westchester Racing Association from London announcing that J. B. Joel had finally given a release from his engagements to Steve Donoghue, so that the most famous of English jockeys may come to this country to ride Papyrus in the $100,000 international race at Belmont Park on Oct. 20. Donoghue has ridden Papyrus in all his great races and was the natural choice to ride the Derby winner against the best of the American three-year-olds. Joel had a call on his services for a number of important races following the running of the St. Leger, the last of Papyrus's three-year-old stake engagements in England.

It is now certain that if Zev is selected as the American representative the two leading jockeys in the world will meet in a duel that will be second in interest only to the battle of their mounts, for Earl H. Sande, who will pilot Zev, if that colt is chosen to meet Papyrus, is conceded to be greatest of the American jockeys of today.

There appears to be no doubt that Zev will be fit for the race of his career if he is the selection of the committee of the Jockey Club. Trainer Hildreth is bringing the son of The Finn and Miss Kearney along steadily and yesterday morning he sent the brown colt out for a workout over the mile and an eighth course on the Belmont Park main track. Zev was accompanied in his gallop by his stable companion, Little Chief, the four-year-old son of Wrack. They breezed the distance in 1:53 2-5, Zev trimming the older colt handily. The fractional times were as follows: 0:26, 0:48 2-5, 1:14, 1:39, 1:53 2-5.

A radiogram was also received yesterday from Basil Jarvis, trainer of Papyrus, which is coming on the Aquitania, stating that both he and Dr. Pride-Jones were well pleased with the condition of the Derby winner on shipboard. The colt is cleaning up his food now in good shape. The message stated that the weather had improved and that there were hopes of a fine voyage for the remaining days.

As the transatlantic liners now coming into port are late, it is expected that the Aquitania also will be later in reaching her pier tomorrow than usual. With everything favorable she customarily would reach her berth about 3 o'clock, but it is feared that it will be late in the afternoon before she can get in. If more storms are encountered it is practically certain that Papyrus will have to wait until Saturday morning before he can set his feet on American soil.

Through the courtesy of Sir Ashley Sparks, the Cunard company is having a special landing stage built in order to reduce to a minimum all danger of injury to the English colt in disembarking. It will be eighty feet in length and the drop will be only one foot in five. The floor will be covered with matting nailed down to prevent slipping and as a further precaution cleats will be placed across the matting.

Joseph E. Widener has placed his palatial French horse van at the disposal of the distinguished English visitor. It is the last word in comfort in horse transportation and it will be at the Cunard pier ready to receive Papyrus when he steps off the ship. The entire side of the van is removable. It is hung low near the ground, so that a horse runs no risk of injury in entering it. It has room for two horses, with a place at their heads for two attendants. Thus Papyrus will not be separated at any time from his faithful stable and work companion, Bar Gold.

Among the passengers on the Olympic, which docked late on Tuesday, was Charles A. Mills, who has the picture rights for the big race. He has a lot of friends on this side and is one of the best known men in racing in England. He bought the rights from Ben Irish.

YANKS CRACK IN 10TH AND TIGERS WIN, 8-3

Gehrig's Double, Which Ties Score, Goes for Naught When Bush Weakens.

HOLLOWAY SAVES DETROIT

Breaks Up New York Rally in the Eighth—Dugan on the Bench With Injured Hand.

The Yankees battled the Tigers for nine innings yesterday in their handsomest World's Series manner and then suddenly fell to pieces in the tenth, letting the visitors score five runs and win the deciding game of a three game series, 8 to 3.

In more ways than one it was a shame that the Tigers had to steal the game away in the tenth. For one thing, it spoiled the day for Lou Gehrig and kept the former Columbia University lad from getting his rightful place in the headlines. The Yanks were three runs behind starting the eighth, but they filled the bases with two out. Ruth was passed, forcing in one run, and then Gehrig whaled a terrific drive over the first baseman's head that was good for two bases and two runs, tying the score.

But alas! in the tenth Joe Bush lost all his skill and the Tigers broke up the game as follows:

Heilmann walked, Rigney sacrificed and Haney singled to left, taking three bases on Meusel's bad throw plateward. Then Schang dropped Ward's throw to the plate and Blue and Cobb singled, and in the confusion the game went by the board.

Ray Francis did well against Bush until Gehrig unseated him with that roaring two-bagger. Kenneth Holloway, called to the rescue, stopped the Yanks cold.

Blue's home run with a man on base in the seventh was the big blow of the day for the Tigers.

Joe Dugan sat on the bench with a slightly bruised hand, the result of being hit by a pitched ball in Tuesday's game.

MERRIMAN IS FIRST IN ARCH CITY PACE

Wins $3,000 Stake at Columbus After Losing First Heat—Steps Last Mile in 2:01¾.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 26 (Associated Press).—Merriman of the Tommy Murphy stable, today won the Arch City $3,000 stake for 2:10 pacers, the feature event of the five races on today's Grand Circuit card.

Merriman's victory was not one of straight heats, as he lost the first heat to Wrack, going to a bad break on the first turn. In the third mile he was also on the verge of breaking on two occasions, but Murphy kept him in the pace and he stepped the last mile in 2:01¾.

Well Worthy, the first choice, won the 2:05 trot, taking the first two heats, but finishing no better than fourth in the third heat, which was won by Walter Sterling.

The favored Gamey the Great won the 2:12 pace only after four heats. Valley Day won the first heat and Homefast the second one. The next two were easy for the Stokes driven roan gelding.

HURLINGHAM LEADS FLAMINGOS, 4 TO 1

Rain and Darkness Stop Opening Polo Game in Waterbury Cup Tourney.

GUEST SCORES TWO GOALS

Works Way Through Stiff American Defense at Piping Rock—Two Contests at Westbury Today.

The opening polo game in the series for the Monty Waterbury Cup was called yesterday at the end of the fourth period, when rain and darkness prevented further play on the field at Piping Rock. At the time the contest was terminated the Hurlingham Club of England was leading the Flamingos by a score of 4 to 1. The mounts of Earle Hopping and the Marquis of Cholmondeley were taken to the field at the Rockaway Hunting Club by mistake, and it was a late hour when the missing mounts finally appeared at Piping Rock and the game began.

The Marquis of Cholmondeley started off with a score in the first period for the English four, and they were never headed, Captain Frederick Guest adding two to the Hurlingham total and Hopping another before the game came to a close. J. C. Cooley, the Flamingos' forward, contributed the only point scored by the American team.

The game, while it lasted, was filled with thrills for the spectators who gathered to watch the proceedings. The horsemanship of the invaders was exceptionally fine, and the strong stickwork of the Marquis of Cholmondeley was always in evidence. The American combination worked the ball up the field on several occasions, only to be turned back on the edge of success by the daring riding and strong stroking of the British team's powerful back. Captain Guest, at forward, was the main scorer for the winners, working his way through the Flamingos' defense and sending the ball through the posts on two occasions, while on several others he threatened dangerously.

Morgan Belmont replaced Harold E. Talbott at No. 2 in the Flamingos' line-up, while Cooley was at his usual position at No. 1, Elliott Bacon at No. 3 and F. H. Prince at back. The Hurlingham representatives were the same as went down to defeat before the Meadow Brook Club team in the first game of the open championship, Captain Guest, the Marquis of Cholmondeley, Hopping and Major F. W. Barrett wearing the colors of the foreign contingent.

Two games are scheduled in the Monty Waterbury Cup series this afternoon. The Meadow Brook Club, under the direction of Devereux Milburn, will face the British Army combination on International Field, Westbury, L. I., in the first game at 3:30 P. M., and Orange County will play the picturesque Indian Tigers on Cochran Field, adjoining, at 4:30. Tickets for game 3 will be honored at the gate.

The line-up of yesterday's contest follows:

HURLINGHAM (4).	FLAMINGOS (1).
1. Capt. Fred'k Guest.	1. J. C. Cooley.
2. Earle W. Hopping.	2. Morgan Belmont.
3. Maj. F. W. Barrett	3. Elliott Bacon.
Back—Marquis of Cholmondeley.	Back—F. H. Prince.

Goals—Hurlingham: Guest (2), Hopping, Marquis of Cholmondeley. Flamingos: Cooley. Called end of fourth period, rain and darkness.

BANKERS OUTLINE NATION'S PROBLEMS

Government Price-Fixing Denounced in Resolutions as a Menace to Welfare.

RADICALISM IS ASSAILED

Reduction of Railroad Rates and Valuations Opposed as Harmful to Business.

LOWER SURTAXES URGED.

Reduction in Wages of Labor Is Favored—F. I. Kent Proposes Cancellation of Allied Debts.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 26.—The general session of the American Bankers' Association convention today adopted resolutions attacking radicalism and excessive Government regulation. The resolutions also opposed the reduction of railroad rates and valuations, advocated lower wages for labor, called for a more liberal immigration policy, designated the settlement of the coal strike as unfair to the public interest, urged the Government to adopt the recommendations of the Economic Policy Commission for the reform of the Federal Reserve System, suggested lower surtaxes on income and recommended that the Debt Funding Commission negotiate with Great Britain and France regarding a settlement of the reparation problem.

Presented by a committee headed by Francis H. Sisson, Vice President of the Guaranty Trust Company, New York, the resolutions were unanimously adopted. The convention also elected officers today for the ensuing year. Walter W. Head, President of the Omaha National Bank, Omaha, Neb., was chosen as President; William E. Knox, President of the Bowery Savings Bank, New York, as First Vice President, and Oscar Wells, President of the First National Bank, Birmingham, Ala., as Second Vice President. There was no contest.

Fred I. Kent, Vice President of the Bankers Trust Company, New York, in an address to the convention, urged the cancellation of the allied debts to the United States in return for an agreement to stabilize conditions in Europe. William A. Scott, Director of the School of Commerce of the University of Wisconsin, urged the education of the public in the principles of money and banking in order to avert unwise legislation. D. H. Otis, Director of the Agricultural Commission of the American Bankers' Association, called for "team work" between bankers and farmers.

At a meeting of the State Bank Division of the convention, Carl Williams of Oklahoma City, President of the American Cotton Growers' Exchange, said that the deflation in the agricultural sections would be the salvation of the farmer because it would teach him to devise his own marketing methods.

Bankers in Strong Position.

The resolutions adopted by the convention began with an assertion that the transition from boom conditions to "tempered but sustained prosperity" had been "the outstanding achievement in the field of American business and finance in 1923." They said the maintenance of prosperity had resulted from the co-operation of business leaders and bankers in warning against undue inflation. The strong position of the bankers, it was stated, was one of the most favorable factors in the present situation.

The resolution warned against the full use of our tremendous gold reserve for credit expansion as likely to involve inflation and disaster. They said it would be impossible to retain all the present stock of gold in this country permanently, as it flowed here because of temporary and abnormal conditions. They urged against any extraordinary devices for disposing of the gold, saying the ordinary agencies in international trade would do it.

Continuing, the resolutions dealing with leading public questions read in part:

"Excessive Government Regulation—The present demonstration in this country of the advantages of individual initiative and self-direction has been made at a time when the menace of unwarranted extensions of Government interference and regulation in business is especially pronounced.

"In defiance of economic laws, groups whose commodities or services are temporarily depressed in relative market values, clamor for Government action in their behalf, when the only real relief can come from those economic readjustments which lie outside the sphere of proper Government action.

"Despite the interference with the activities of commodity exchanges, the need for the orderly exercise of the speculative function in business persists. Suppression in this field reacts most harmfully upon the very interests which it is intended to benefit.

"The cry for Government purchasing of wheat or the fixing of its price above the market is another case in point. Obviously the corrective for inadequate prices of wheat is an adjustment of production to demand which reflects the requirements of consumption. Raising the price by Government interference would tend to perpetuate the relative oversupply of the commodity. Domestic production would be stimulated by the artificial price. And, unless the Government promptly takes a loss by marketing abroad its purchased stocks, the output of other wheat-growing countries would rise to meet the requirements of importing countries. In any case, price-fixing would bring no permanent relief, and the immediate cost of the experiment would fall upon the taxpayer. Moreover, if the Government is to undertake to raise the price of one commodity by such means, producers of innumerable other products might, with equal warrant, lay claim upon the taxpayers' money.

Radicalism.

"Radicalism—We regard the continued agitation for so-called nationalization of industries as a menace to national welfare. It is linked with the persistent efforts to undermine the fundamentals of the American system of government. Government ownership in the field of industry weakens the economic structure. With a minimum of necessary regulation the basis of freedom for individual enterprise must be preserved."

Regarding taxation, the resolutions say:

"The complete tax exemption of many billions of dollars of public securities is an important factor in the unequal distribution of the burden, and the necessary action for the gradual elimination of this feature of our fiscal system should be promptly taken.

"The rates of surtaxes on incomes should be revised downward. It is evident that their legitimate evasion is a disturbing element not only in our tax system, but in the security markets as well. Tax levying bodies cannot hamper the legitimate functions of private business by depriving business of necessary capital and penalize thrift and enterprise without in turn destroying values and retarding progress."

The resolution on wages says:

"Business is confronted with the handicap of excessive labor costs of production, reflecting wage scales which have been raised out of proportion to general prices or cost of living.

"The pressure of public opinion should be directed toward the encouragement of the resort to voluntary arbitration in cases where direct negotiations between employes and employer fail to reach an agreement. The resort to force in the form of strikes entails needless costs and hardships for the public."

The settlement of the anthracite coal strike, the resolutions say, "has again demonstrated the public's relative helplessness with the powerful monopoly of organized labor in this industry. The people feel a growing resentment over the prospect of constantly enhancing prices for anthracite imposing a further burden upon the already oppressed consumer, and look to the Government for the protection of the public interest which has apparently been to a degree forgotten in the agreement which has been reached in the present controversy."

Immigration.

The resolution on immigration says: "The numerical restrictions upon immigration imposed by the present law do not, in our opinion, represent a satisfactory immigration policy. This law—limiting, with certain exceptions, the number of immigrants of each nationality admissible in any fiscal year to 3 per cent. of the numbers of the foreign born of the respective nationalities residing in this country in 1910—excluded many who are clearly fit socially and industrially for admission and who could make genuine contributions to the national welfare. The law should be liberalized by providing for selection on the basis of quality, the selection to be made abroad as far as practical."

The resolution on railroads says:

"It is in the interest of the public that the Transportation act should be given a fair trial and that the carriers be permitted earnings adequate for the maintenance and development of the systems."

In regard to agricultural credits the resolutions say:

"The new machinery of agricultural credit adopted last year, though of doubtful value, should be allowed to demonstrate its effectiveness, without further tinkering.

"The fact that the relative purchasing power of farm products as a whole has been increasing in recent months is evidence that gradually the prices of these products are assuming a more nearly normal relation to general prices."

In opposing a soldier bonus, the resolutions say:

"This committee renews its former statement of its interest in the welfare and comfort of our disabled soldiers, but it sees in an indiscriminate allotment of money to able-bodied veterans a serious menace to the credit of the nation and a tremendous drain upon an already heavily taxed Treasury."

European Situation.

Referring to the European situation, the resolutions again "urge upon the Administration the advisability of giving an official standing to our representative upon the Reparation Commission in order that he may express his opinion with his vote; and further recommend that the Debt Funding Commission immediately enter into negotiations with Great Britain and France in connection with such part of the reparation question as may be included in the interallied indebtedness in order that the commission may be in position to make such recommendations to Congress as it may consider desirable and to the interest of the United States.

"A policy of complete isolation from European affairs cannot be maintained indefinitely without grave danger to our own interests. The example of Austria, aided, in part, by American capital in the rehabilitation which is now clearly in progress in that nation, indicated that methods by which America may, in due course, when the will to establish political, financial and economic stability and maintain peace has been convincingly demonstrated abroad, be a powerful influence in the betterment of other Continental countries."

Mr. Kent in his speech went further than the Resolution Committee with regard to the European situation. He said that Congress should empower the Debt Funding Commission not only to negotiate with our European debtors but also to present plans for cancellation to the Senate for ratification.

Mr. Kent approved the French occupation of the Ruhr. It had brought the reparation question to a head, he said.

"If the French demand the impossible and continue to develop their military power, as is feared in so many quarters," he added, "the world may be a difficult place in which to live for many years to come, exactly as might have been true had not the occupation of the Ruhr occurred.

"On the other hand, if the French are fair and reasonable and it is found possible to develop agreements which will result in the elimination of militarism throughout Europe, a new era of tremendous prosperity may be in sight."

Accused of Stealing Violins From 30 Children by Ruse

Adys George, 42 years old, an Armenian embroidery worker, of 316 West Twentieth Street, who, the police allege, has been victimizing children in Harlem, the Bronx and Yorkville by stealing their violins, was held in $2,500 bail for examination Friday by Magistrate James Barrett in Harlem Court yesterday. Police declared that more than thirty children had been victimized, and that twelve had identified George as the man who stole their instruments by the trick of offering money for an errand and holding the instruments. When the children returned the man had vanished. They said he stationed himself at places where the boys passed on their way to musical schools. George pleaded not guilty, and declared that he had never before seen any of the boys. He was charged with the larceny of the violin of William Harazin, 14 years old, of 435 East Seventy-ninth Street, on Sept. 17.

RECEIVER WILL HOLD PART OF PIGGLY STOCK

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 26.—Judge J. W. Ross ruled in the United States District Court here today that a temporary receiver should be appointed for such stock of the Piggly-Wiggly Stores, Inc., as had been pledged by Clarence Saunders personally while he was executive head of the Piggly-Wiggly Corporation, parent Piggly-Wiggly organization, in connection with various financial transactions.

The amount of stock affected was estimated at approximately $1,250,000.

The Court order directed that none of the stock affected be disposed of pending further Court action.

The order was issued incidental to the hearing of a petition filed by Saunders seeking to have a receiver appointed for the Piggly-Wiggly Corporation. Saunders contends that in various financial transactions he acted as agent for the corporation.

The corporation is contesting Saunders's demand for a receivership.

300,000 HERE WAIT IN VAIN FOR COAL

City Investigators Report That Number of Unfilled Orders After Canvass.

PLENTY IS BEING SHIPPED

Mrs. Welzmiller Charges That Dealers Are Holding It for Higher Prices Later.

Three hundred thousand coal orders in New York are unfilled, according to the Department of Public Markets, which, with the assistance of the Investigating Committee of the Women's Market Committee, has declared war on the coal profiteers.

A city-wide canvass reveals that the coal situation is far worse than had been estimated. While a field force of 150, at the instance of the Investigating Committee, is pursuing its house-to-house inquiry, the Department of Public Markets has received independently reports from 185 centres. Deputy Commissioner Mrs. Louis Reed Welzmiller reports she has been swamped with letters from New York housewives saying they are incensed at the profiteering prices of the coal dealers and the evasive statements in response to the question why supplies for New York City are being held up when the yards of the railroad companies are choked with coal.

The reports to the Department of Public Markets are from Manhattan, Bronx, Brooklyn, Queens and Staten Island. These complain that no positive prices are being quoted by dealers; people are forced to buy without knowing what they will pay; some are paying up to $17 a ton for immediate delivery of one ton, and emergencies are not being recognized, save in a few instances.

20,000 Orders Not Filled.

A Brooklyn report says twenty thousand orders placed with the main office of the Commonwealth Fuel Company in April remain unfilled. Prices, the local coal dealers say, will be fixed when and if the coal is delivered.

Other reports say that prices are fluctuating from $14.25 a ton to $18. For taking coal into the cellar 50 cents is charged, which the Department of Public Markets characterizes as unauthorized and exorbitant. In many places no orders are being taken, while in others orders taken in July are promised for October "if possible."

A typical report comes from the negro section in Harlem, which says no large orders are being accepted for immediate delivery, and the small retailers are taking advantage of the shortage by offering coke at $15 a ton, and charcoal at 80 cents a bushel. According to the Department of Public Markets the profits on the sale of charcoal is more than 80 per cent. The general price for anthracite in this district is $20 a ton, but a few dealers were selling 100 pound lots at the rate of $17 and $18, and in one case a dealer was charging $1.20 for 100 pounds, reports said. As the coal was mined in long tons and sold at short ton rates, this works out at more than $26 a ton, it was pointed out.

Thirty dealers were interviewed on Staten Island, whence numerous complaints had been received. Typical answers were that there was no coal to be had and that prices and deliveries could not be guaranteed.

Asks Inquiry in Queens.

A letter was received yesterday by Mrs. Welzmiller from Mrs. Lillie C. Lewis, prominent civic and social worker in Queens, in which she said:

"I have noticed with interest the articles in THE TIMES in reference to the investigation to be made of coal profiteers. The Borough of Queens does not seem to be included and I feel that there is considerable need for inquiry here. In the town of Richmond Hill we have had no delivery of coal on an order placed in July and get no satisfactory date as to delivery, and, of course, no price is quoted. I believe the price has risen to around $17 a ton. In passing the freight yards of the Long Island Railroad I noticed several carloads of coal standing in the yard. Will you kindly include the Borough of Queens in your investigations?"

Commenting on these reports and letters, Mrs. Welzmiller said that her interpretation was that big coal dealers were holding up coal supplies in order to boost prices later.

"We have information from the storage yards that plenty of coal is coming in, but its destination is kept secret. My investigators reported to me today, for example, that about 1,000 cars of coal had come into the city. If this figure is correct how is it that four out of five households in New York cannot get any coal at all?"

Commissioner Edwin J. O'Malley, at whose request Mrs. Welzmiller is conducting inquiries, said yesterday that the reports did not tell the whole tale.

Calls for Drastic Action.

"Unless strong action is taken," he said, "the coal situation in New York promises to be nearly as bad as last year. The consumer is at the absolute mercy of the retailer, who, with the uncertainty as to prices and deliveries, is taking every opportunity to pluck the coalless citizen."

"Because coal dealers are not licensed they are not required to give information on prices and amount of coal they have in hand. For all practical purposes they can charge what they like, and the municipal authorities are helpless.

"All the anthracite is going to Canada as well as the best kinds of other coal. The official excuse for this is that shipments must be made before the Great Lakes freeze over.

"When I urged the Carroll bill last year, which would control coal, food, and ice dealers by forcing them to take out licenses I was severely criticized and called a "Czar." But some bill such as this must certainly be passed by the Legislature unless the public wish to have the same situation year after year."

DROPS 20, NAMED FOR BENCH

Bar Association Committee Busy on Judiciary Candidates.

At an executive session of the Nonpartisan Judiciary Committee of the Bar Association yesterday its members eliminated from consideration about twenty of the forty names of candidates for the Supreme Court which had been submitted by the Judiciary Committee of the Republican County Committee and other independent organizations. The committee will hold a conference today with the committee of the County Lawyers' Association and the list will be still further reduced.

On Friday or Saturday the Bar Association committee will submit its final list for action at the Republican Judiciary Convention next Monday.

TWO NEW SCHOOL HEADS.

E. Mandel and E. W. Stitt Made Associate Superintendents.

Two Associate Superintendents of Public Schools were elected by the Board of Education at its regular meeting yesterday, to fill vacancies caused by the retirement of Edward Dubs Shimer and John H. Walsh. Edward Mandel will succeed Mr. Shimer and Edward Walmsley Stitt Mr. Walsh.

Among contracts approved was one for the construction of the James Monroe High School in the Bronx and for the new Public School 116, Queens. The appointment of Miss Martha Westfall as Director of Cooking was approved, to take effect as soon as she is assigned by Superintendent Ettinger.

Bureau Was Wrecked by Quart of Gasoline, Vaporized in Test of Airplane Engine

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—About one quart of gasoline, vaporized under artificial atmospheric conditions, was responsible for the explosion in the altitude chamber of the United States Bureau of Standards Sept. 20, costing the lives of four sicentific experts and injuring six others, a special committee of investigation, headed by Lyman J. Briggs, physicist at the bureau, reported to Secretary of Commerce Hoover today. This small amount of gasoline evaporated in this way produced an explosition so violent that the ten-inch walls of the chamber were shattered and heavy pieces of machinery were hurled through the air.

The board declared it believed the explosion was directly due to a leak in the feed line leading to the carburetor of the airplane engine then being tested or to a leak from the carburetor caused by the sticking of the float mechanism. Backfire through the carburetor, and not an electrical short circuit, ignited the gasoline, the board thinks.

"The condition of the set-up following the fire is such that it is not possible to establish which one of the above causes occasioned the leak," the report reads, in part. "Since it is known that only three gallons of gasoline had been drawn for the test, that the engine had been running from about 11 A. M. to 12 noon with the chamber open, that the chamber was closed at about 12:30 for the purpose of running at a lower temperature and that the engine had been operated from about 1 to 2 P. M. with the chamber closed, it is believed that not more than a quart of gasoline could have escaped into the chamber. This amount, however, if vaporized, would have been sufficient to account for the energy of the explosion.

"The probable source of the ignition was a backfire through the carburetor. Support to this conclusion is given by the statement of one of the survivors that he heard the engine backfire immediately before the explosion.

"The explosion threw out of the chamber a closed apparatus containing about ten gallons of heavy lubricating oil and about five gallons of toluol, breaking the pipe connections and thus releasing part of the contents, which furnished additional fuel for the fire which followed.

"The explosion also shattered the fuel-measuring system used in the test, which was outside the chamber and contained about two quarts of gasoline. This was the only gasoline supply involved in the fire.

"Special mention should be made of the action of C. M. Smith, engineer in charge of the ammonia plant, who, after being blown out of the building and badly cut about the head, returned to the wrecked chamber and shut off two ammonia valves, and then went to the refrigerating plant in the basement and operated it to pump the ammonia out of the coils in the wrecked chamber. This action may have prevented further loss of life and the destruction of the entire building by fire.

"It should also be added that the situation resulting from the explosion was handled courageously and intelligently by the men on the scene, and that no loss of life or property damage can be charged to any lack of promptness or efficiency in handling the situation."

The special committee is making an independent inquiry to ascertain the financial situation of the families of the killed and injured men. No one of those killed was receiving more than $2,000 from the Government, although engaged in dangerous and highly technical work. Compensation to their families will not exceed $50 monthly. The committee has in view recommending adequate relief measures for their families to Congress.

WOULD ARBITRATE ALL COAL DISPUTES

J. C. Brydon Says It Is Nation-Wide Strike That Raises Price to Public.

OUTLINES RISE IN WAGES

Warns Bituminous Contract Expires April 1 and Urges Vigorous Stand by Officials.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 26 (Associated Press).—The American public, faced by the termination of the United Mine Workers' contracts in the bituminous fields April 1, must bear a hand now and make sure the representatives of the public in official positions do not "befog or run away from the issue, but meet it squarely and vigorously," declared J. C. Brydon, President of the National Coal Association, in an address before the general session of the twenty-sixth annual convention of the American Mining Congress here today.

From the standpoint of the public, Mr. Brydon declared, there is but one clear principle which must sooner or later be recognized if the artificial power of combination in labor relations is to continue to be permitted. This, he said, carries recognition that this power assumes certain limitations, viz.: "It shall not beat the public over the head with the bludgeon of a nation-wide strike"; it must in the failure to agree by negotiation be willing to submit differences of opinion to voluntary impartial arbitration.

According to Mr. Brydon there must be arranged a system of contractual relationships in which responsibility for observance of contracts will be enforced and recurring crises in the industrial life of the nation eliminated.

"There has never been and there is today not the remotest possibility of monopoly of capital in the soft coal industry, for, as some one has said, 'geology enforces the Sherman act,'" declared Mr. Brydon. "There are enormous undeveloped coal reserves. Under these circumstances supply always potentially equals or exceeds demand, and hence competition may be relied on to prevent high prices.

"It is only when the competitive processes are reversed by nation-wide strikes in the mines or on the railroads that a runaway market occasioned by competition of buyers is possible. Stop runaway strikes and you prevent runaway markets."

Mr. Brydon said the chief element in the cost of producing coal is labor. It approximates 68 per cent. of the total cost of production, he declared, and it is the element of cost that has increased most markedly since the pre-war period. Wages of bituminous coal miners are 182 per cent. higher than in 1913, he said, while the cost of living is only 69.5 higher. Their wages are higher than those of every other variety of unskilled labor and they are even higher than those of almost every class of skilled labor, he contended. In other words, bituminous miners in 1922 made 160 per cent. more than the average unskilled laborer and 86 per cent. more than the average skilled worker in the manufacturing industries of the country.

The reason for these alleged inflated values Mr. Brydon assigned to the fact that "labor in other industries is competitive, while labor in the bituminous coal industry is largely a monopoly."

Production of oil from shale is a "second line of defense" in the nation's search for an ideal fuel, according to a statement made in the oil shale conference of the congress by Victor C. Anderson, President of the Colorado School of Mines.

Mr. Anderson stated that the immensity of oil shale deposits in Colorado alone was such that if 100 plants were in operation, handling 2,000 tons of shale per day, it would take 800 years to use the available supply.

Kentucky, according to Professor C. S. Crouse of that State, has about 100,000,000 tons of out-crop shale of an average of one-half barrel to the ton.

Oil shale, conference speakers claimed, if extensively refined, the product would comprise, in future years, the fuel oil supply of the nation.

MANY EDUCATORS ON LINER.

Albania Brings Large Group Home From Europe.

Dr. J. H. Latane, Dean of the Faculty of Johns Hopkins University at Baltimore, returned yesterday on the Cunarder Albania from a two months' tour through Europe during which he visited Geneva and observed the work of the Council of the League of Nations.

"I think that the League has already demonstrated itself as being an nidispensable piece of international machinery," said Dr. Latane.

The Albania brought over a large contingent of college professors, among whom were Dr. James W. Alexander, Princeton; Dr. G. E. Beggs, Princeton; Mrs. G. H. Conkling, Smith; Professor Arthur J. Hopkins, Amherst, and Professor M. Scott, Princeton.

Majestic May Set a Record.

A radio yesterday from Captain Sir Bertram Hayes said that the Majestic was steaming at 25 knots and that unless it encountered fog it would reach Cherbourg at 8 P. M. tonight. This will be the first time that a liner leaving New York on Saturday has arrived at Cherbourg the following Thursday evening.

POLICE HEARINGS HALTED TILL OCT. 8

HIS WITNESSES ABSENT

Judge Crain Stipulates That Proceedings Must Be Ended by Oct. 26.

Hearings in the Enright libel proceedings against Magistrate Corrigan and Assemblyman Cuvillier were halted yesterday on the plea of John D. Lindsay, counsel for Magistrate Corrigan, for an adjournment long enough to prepare material which he said he had in his possession for presentation to the court. Judge Crain adjourned the hearing until Oct. 8, but with the proviso that the case must be concluded by Oct. 26.

Judge Crain granted the adjournment despite objections by Assistant District Attorney Albert Unger and Harry A. Gordon, counsel for Commissioner Enright. Mr. Lindsay pointed out that witnesses whom he called yesterday had failed to appear and that until he had studied other material he would be unable to keep up an orderly presentation of evidence.

The adjournment will give an opportunity for the disposition of several proceedings outside of Judge Crain's court, which have an important bearing on the case. All of them relate to the so-called Petrucci incident. The first is scheduled for Monday in the United States District Court, where George J. Shevlin has been ordered to appear for trial on an indictment charging bootlegging. Shevlin, regarded as the key witness in the Petrucci case, has long evaded representatives of Mr. Lindsay and Assistant District Attorney Ferdinand Pecora, who sought his presence as a witness before Judge Crain. Mr. Pecora said yesterday that he would serve Shevlin with a subpoena on Monday.

On Wednesday Nicholas Petrucci's counsel is to move in the Supreme Court for a habeas corpus writ on appeal from Judge Crain's sentence of thirty days in the Tombs for contempt of court. The Police Department trial of Lambert and Morrison for bribery, neglect of duty and testifying falsely before Judge Crain is to begin on Thursday.

Charles Tiernan, formerly a bartender in a saloon at Twenty-seventh Street and Ninth Avenue, was the principal witness yesterday. Tiernan testified concerning a raid which Detective Sergeant Robert F. McAllister made in November, 1922. Tiernan, who was a witness before Commissioner of Accounts Hirshfield in a previous inquiry, repeated the testimony that he had given before, to the effect that McAllister did not find any whisky but filled a bottle with sink water and later exhibited in court a bottle of entirely different appearance containing "an amber-colored liquid like whisky."

Tiernan was held for the Grand Jury. The complaint against him was dismissed. "And I don't quarrel with the Grand Jury's judgment," said Mr. Pecora, who has presented the evidence himself. Mr. Pecora objected, however, to the admission of Tiernan's testimony on the ground that it was not material to the issue in the libel proceeding. Judge Crain said that he would let it stand for the present.

Deputy Inspector James E. Troy and Patrolman Harry Wallach were the other witnesses yesterday. They were questioned about details of the raid in June, 1922, at the home of Morris H. Elvidge in West End Avenue. Elvidge charged that part of the whisky taken in the raid and later ordered returned was never accounted for.

CONDEMNS PHRENOLOGY AS TEST OF ABILITY

Prof. Snow Calls Employment Experts Who Judge by It and Physiognomy 'Fakers.'

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—Employment experts who claim they can judge an applicant's ability by phrenology and physiognomy were called "psychological fakers" by Professor A. J. Snow of the Psychology Department of Northwestern University, speaking here today before a meeting of assistant managers of a chain store company.

"It's about time we stopped such indefensible practices, permissable only because of the ignorance of the general public," he declared.

HYLAN CONTINUES TO MEND.

Swelling of Leg Virtually Gone—Some Pleurisy Remains.

Special to The New York Times.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Mayor John F. Hylan continued to improve today. A bulletin signed by Drs. George F. and Carl R. Comstock read:

"The condition or Mayor John F. Hylan continues to be satisfactory. The swelling of the right leg has practically disappeared. The pneumonic process has cleared, except for a few remaining evidences of the pleurisy from which Mr. Hylan suffered."

BOY DRIFTS TO DEATH IN EAST SIDE SEWER

Firemen in Search Climb 20 Feet Down in Score of Broome St. Manholes.

BODY FOUND NEAR RIVER

A small boy fell into a sewer twenty feet below the street through the collapse of a manhole in Broome Street, near Attorney Street, at 5:30 o'clock last night. An hour later one of fifty firemen who descended into the black depths found the boy's body seven blocks away, drifting toward the East River. The fireman carried the boy to the street, where four tanks of oxygen were used during the next half hour in a vain effort to bring the lad back to life, and then callapsed himself.

The boy was identified several hours later by his mother as Morris Glicht, 4 years old, of 124 Broome Street. He was one of a dozen children playing in Broome Street's restricted area when the accident occurred. He had climbed up the stanchion which warns vehicular traffic that the block is reserved for playing children. When he dropped from the stanchion he landed on the manhole, a foot away. The cover, cracked perhaps by the heavy passage of a truck, broke into three parts and the boy fell into the sewer with them.

His playmates shouted for help. One of them ran up to Harry Weissman, who lives at 341 Riverdale Avenue in the Bronx, who pulled the fire alarm at the corner. A crowd, such as can gather only on the east side, was on hand when Engines 15, 17 and 11, with Hook and Ladder companies 6 and 18 rolled up to the scene. Battalion Chief McElligott arrived as Captain Anthony Poggi of Engine 15 called for a scaling ladder.

Captain Poggi Descends.

"Don't go down there without rope around you, Tony," McElligott shouted to the fire captain. A seemingly unending coil of rope was brought, one end of it was tied about Poggi's waist and he went down. When he reached the foot of the ladder he dropped into the water up to his waist, and as he plodded through the dark tunnel yard after yard of rope followed him.

McElligott then ordered firemen to open every manhole cover from Attorney Street to the East River, eleven blocks, with from three to four manholes to a block. He also sent a call for help from the Department of Sewers. Two representatives of this branch soon arrived and went to the East River end of the sewer which they blockaded with a device resembling a huge strainer. The tide was coming in. The water in the sewer soon would be more than six feet deep.

Poggi walked through the sewer tunnel to Ridge Street, where he shouted to his waiting chief that the boy was not to be found. He asked that the rope be pulled back out of the Attorney Street manhole. Then he went on through the sewer to Cannon Street, nearly seven blocks distant.

Driven Out by Gases.

McElligott meanwhile had ordered firemen into the sewer at each of the manholes, but after fifteen minutes they came to the street, one by one, to report that they had seen nothing of the boy. After a breath of air they were ordered back. Poggi, groping to a ladder near Cannon Street, reported that noxious gases had driven him out. He collapsed later in his quarters and was sent home.

James Landres, fireman, of Truck 18, who had been one of the first firemen ordered into the sewer, was the first to descend when McElligott bade his men return. He went back this time between Lewis and Goerck Streets. Presently those on the street heard him shout:

"Hold the ladder! I've got him!"

He came to the street surface with the body of the boy slung over his shoulder. Both were soaking wet. He placed his burden tenderly on the pavement and then pitched headlong into a dead faint. The boy, the watchers, thought, was dead. He was carried to the sidewalk, where members of the Rescue Squad, which had been ordered into action, started work with a pulmotor. The appliance ate up one tank of oxygen after another, until four had been emptied, without a spark of life from the prostrate boy.

Lieutenant Thomas Kilbride, in charge of the Rescue Squad, however, thought he detected signs of life and ordered the lad placed in the Rescue Squad's apparatus and rushed to Gouverneur Hospital. The pulmotor was applied throughout the trip, but when the hospital was reached physicians pronounced the boy dead.

Hundreds of mothers later flocked to the hospital seeking to identify the body, but up to a late hour last night no one, not even the children who had been playing with the boy near the corner of Brooms and Attorneys Streets, could furnish his name and address.

Landres, unconscious and suffering from gas poisoning, was taken to Gouverneur Hospital, and last night was reported as in a serious condition, although it was thought that he would recover.

JUDGE RAPS BONDED CRIME.

Talley Assails Firms Which Go Bail for Known Criminals.

Declaring that "the worse the record of a criminal the easier it appears to be for him to get bail," Judge Alfred J. Talley in General Sessions yesterday attacked the methods of bonding companies in criminal cases and demanded an explanation from the representative of one company which had furnished bail for an alleged pickpocket who had been arrested twelve times.

Judge Talley's remarks were made on the arraignment of Samuel Schiff, 34, charged with stealing a man's wallet on Broadway on Sept. 16. He was indicted as a first offender, but was reindicted as a second offender on Tuesday. Judge Talley raised his bail from $5,000 to $50,000 and Schiff was sent to the Tombs.

The surety company which had provided bail for Schiff following the first indictment was the New Amsterdam Casualty Company of 60 John Street, and in response to a summons from Judge Talley, William McGinley, an official of the company, appeared in court.

McGinley told Judge Talley it was not the custom of his company to bail second offenders. He said he was not familiar with the Schiff case, but pointed out that Schiff was originally indicted as a first offender. McGinley declined to make any further comment outside of court.

CAUTIONS ON FORD REPORTS

Dearborn Independent Editor Says Exploiters Are Busy.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Sept. 26.—To an inquiry from The Chattanooga News in regard to reports that Henry Ford was abandoning the Muscle Shoals proposal, W. J. Cameron of The Dearborn Independent telegraphed:

"In Mr. Ford's absence, no statement has been made, and I would advise caution in accepting reports that are based upon the desires of exploiters."

Mr. Cameron is thought to be in touch with his chief's ideas on the matter.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 26.—The State Senate adopted a resolution yesterday urging Henry Ford to revise his offer for the Muscle Shoals project. The resolution held out hope that the Detroit manufacturer might yet buy the nitrate plant at Muscle Shoals.

I., won several prizes today in the vegetable exhibit at the Nassau County Fair here. Among his competitors were Mrs. Harold I. Pratt of Locust Valley, and Payne Whitney of Wheatley Hills.

The annual horse show in connection with the fair will begin this afternoon. Thomas Hitchcock and Mrs. Hitchcock and Thomas Hitchcock Jr., international polo player, will exhibit their horses today.

CHIEF CLUE FAILS IN GIRL'S MURDER

Philadelphian Whose Arrest Was Predicted Cleared of Any Connection With Case.

AUTO DEATH THEORY GAINS

Prosecutor "Coming to Conclusion" Motorist Whose Car Killed Emma Dickson Hid Body.

Special to The New York Times.

MILLVILLE, N. J., Sept. 26.—Following the failure today in Philadelphia of residents of this place to identify James Clement Caskey, an employe of that city and son-in-law of Elias Abrams, a political leader, as the man who was seen riding with Emma Dickson the day of her murder, investigators of the crime tonight apparently were entirely at sea again. Caskey was cleared of any knowledge of circumstances which led up to the girl's death.

Prediction had been made yesterday that the arrest of a "prominent Philadelphian" would be made "within twenty-four hours." Now the detectives on the case admit they are as far from the solution of the murder of the young high school girl as they were when her body was found last Saturday in a clump of bushes beside the Port Elizabeth road.

Irma Hummel, a chum of the dead girl, said she had seen Emma drive away Sept. 13, the day of her death, with a man in an automobile. A fragmentary description of the man, which tallied in some respects with that of Caskey, and the fact that the Philadelphian frequently had taken the girl and his own children out for auto rides, caused the Millville police to go to Philadelphia to interview him.

Before they arrived in Philadelphia they had been preceded by the rumor of the girl's story, which had been followed by an indignant and detailed denial from Mr. Caskey.

The Hummel girl, taken to the Caskey home, looked at Mr. Caskey, who stood back from the door, his hat off, smiling but showing traces of worry.

"Is that the man you saw riding with Emma that night?" a detective asked.

Mr. Caskey looked straight at the girl.

"No, sir, that's not the man at all," the girl replied quickly.

"Certainly I am not," he said. "I was in Philadelphia all day, but this surely was a strain for a time."

Mr. Casky is forty-six years old, and is an inspector in the Water Bureau. His father-in-law has a Summer home near the Dickson home in Bricksboro and the Caskeys have been spending the Summers there for years.

County Prosecutor Roscoe G. Ward expressed no surprise when notified of the results of the inquiry in Philadelphia. "I was confident," he said, "that Caskey could have no possible connection with the case, but in keeping with our policy of following up all clues, no matter how impossible they seem, we thought it best to investigate."

Mr. Ward also announced that the order for the exhumation of the girl's body had been cancelled by Judge Logue of Bridgeton, after a conference last night with doctors who convinced him nothing could be derived from a second autopsy.

Asked if the authorities had any further clues on which to work Prosecutor Ward said they had several but none tangible.

"I am rapidly coming to the conclusion," he said, "that the girl was killed by a motor car and dragged into the bushes by the driver of the car after he saw she was dead."

Public sentiment in Bricksboro strongly leans to this theory. Persons accustomed to driving over the Port Elizabeth Road say that at this time of the year the fog hangs heavily over the marshlands and renders driving extremely difficult. They say that, particularly at dusk, it is impossible to see any one who might be walking in the road.

The Prosecutor said that it was not impossible that Emma may have ridden in an automobile with a friend in the direction of Millville, for a short distance, and that while walking back she might have been killed.

CAR DRIVEN OFF PIER; TWO WOMEN DROWN

Army Captain Rescues Another and Baby at Norfolk—Two Officers Saved by Leap.

NORFOLK, Va., Sept. 26.—Two women were drowned when an automobile carrying six persons was driven into Norfolk harbor at the army base pier last night. Mrs. J. W. Moss, the driver, and Mrs. James P. Stevenson lost their lives.

Captain L. F. Pape, commanding officer of the base, dived into the water from an army transport and rescued Mrs. Phyllis Backus and her baby.

Captain J. P. Stevenson, retired, of the Marine Corps, and Captain J. S. Allen, the other occupants of the automobile, leaped from the machine as it left the pier and escaped injury.

Jerome, was committed Saturday by Judge Radford to the insane asylum at Middletown, Conn., and was taken there on Monday. The application was made by his wife.

Drs. A. E. Austin and A. F. Hanlon were appointed by Judge Radford to examine Mr. Marshall, and on their report the commitment was issued.

Mr. Marshall is 54 years of age. He has no children. He had been under observation at two sanitariums in Stamford.

Hartigan Charge Dismissed.

The charge of grand larceny against Joseph Hartigan, former Commissioner of Weights and Measures, brought about by his alleged attempt to rob a cigar store in West Eighteenth Street on Aug. 24, was dismissed yesterday by Magistrate McQuade in Jefferson Market Court after the Court had been informed that Hartigan was confined in the Bloomingdale Sanitarium at White Plains. Hartigan is 42 years old.

DEMAND OF $385,000 MADE ON ROTHSTEIN

Attorney for Fuller Creditors Holds Him Liable for Broker's Race Track Winnings.

MEMORY FAULTY ON STAND

CAUTIONED BY REFEREE

Arnold Rothstein's testimony yesterday before Referee Harold P. Coffin was highly negative. Whenever his wabbling recollection clung to some fact in relation to the affairs of the bankrupt brokerage house of E. M. Fuller & Co., the ex-gambler did not care to put the recollection into words. Invariably, when denial was not forthcoming or the witness did not suffer a relapse into forgetfulness, he decided that an answer would tend to degrade and incriminate him.

Both Referee Coffin and William M. Chadbourne, counsel for 4,000 creditors of the firm, were indignant. Reminded by referee and attorney that he was accounted one of the shrewdest men in New York, Rothstein nevertheless professed not to understand many questions. His conduct, complained Chadbourne, was like that of a child of 10.

Rothstein was bondsman for Edward M. Fuller and William F. McGee until they were sent to jail for contempt for their failure to produce books ordered before the Federal Court. Yesterday he was well groomed, alert and unperturbed even when Mr. Chadbourne demanded $385,000 from him for the Fuller creditors.

Silent on Fallon & McGee.

"His answers on June 25 were quite unsatisfactory and the purpose of this hearing is to give him an opportunity to answer the questions satisfactorily," explained Mr. Chadbourne at the outset. Turning to Rothstein, he said:

"You were asked June 25 whether the law firm of Fallon & McGee or William J. Fallon or Eugene F. McGee ever acted as counsel for you."

"I don't see what that has to do with the assets," parried Rothstein.

"Were they your attorneys during the period E. M. Fuller & Co. was in business?"

"How long were they in business? I'd have to know that," inquired the witness.

"From 1918 on," Chadbourne informed him.

"I refuse to answer. It might tend to degrade and incriminate."

"Did you in August, 1922, visit the law offices of Fallon & McGee and have any conversation with Fallon about his representing Fuller and William F. McGee?"

"I might have discussed the Fuller case with Fallon," conceded Rothstein. "It was a long time ago. I don't remember any such conversation."

"Did you ever have such a conversation with Fallon at any other time?"

"I don't remember any such conversation at any time."

"Did you not have a conversation with Fallon in which you agreed with him as to the retainer he would receive for representing Edward M. Fuller and William F. McGee?"

"No."

Doesn't Recall a $15,000 Fee.

"Isn't it a fact that $15,000 was the fee agreed upon, $7,500 to be paid at once and $7,500 on the acquittal of Fuller and William F. McGee?"

"Why ask me? I know nothing about it," replied Rothstein.

"Isn't it a fact that Fuller and William F. McGee gave you $8,700, of which $7,500 was to be paid to Fallon & McGee for defending them?"

"I don't recall that. I don't recall their ever giving me anything."

"You never received from them any money, directly or indirectly, part of which was for Fallon & McGee as their retainer for defending Fuller and William F. McGee?"

"I refuse to answer those questions as tending to incriminate and degrade."

Taking up the allegation that Rothstein received from Fuller $385,000 in a race track wager, Chadbourne asked, "Did you ever receive the personal check of Edward M. Fuller for $385,000 on account of a transaction you had with him?"

"I refuse to answer. It would degrade and incriminate."

"Do you know Charles A. Stoneham?"

"Very slightly."

Stoneham, owner of the Giants, is under indictment for perjury for swearing that $147,500 he advanced the brokers at the request of ex-Sheriff Thomas F. Foley was a loan and not payment toward $200,000 he was alleged to have agreed to pay for a one-quarter interest in the profits.

Liable, Referee Tells Witness.

Referee Coffin remarked to the witness, "You realize, do you, that if you received any money from Fuller for a gaming transaction that you would be liable to the trustee for the money? Think that over."

"Are any of your transactions with E. M. Fuller & Co., or with Fuller or William F. McGee recorded on the books of Arnold Rothstein & Co.?" asked Mr. Chadbourne.

"No."

"How comes it you are so positive on this point and so doubtful on others?"

"Because Arnold Rothstein & Co. have been incorporated only a year."

"Have you talked with Fuller or William F. McGee since the petition in bankruptcy was filed against them?"

"If they were at large I talked with them," he admitted.

"You know they were at large," the Referee interjected. Thereupon, Rothstein added: "Well, I talked with them up to the time they went to Ludlow Street Jail." He denied visiting them in jail or telephoning them there.

"In your conversations with them was there any discussion as to raising funds by them to defend themselves?"

"I don't remember much about that."

Memory Good in Particular Lines.

"Would you say you have a faulty memory?" asked Referee Coffin.

"No, I have a good memory," said Rothstein.

"In certain lines of your endeavors you have a good memory," remarked Mr. Coffin.

"It must be evident to the Court," said Mr. Chadbourne, "that we are not going to make any progress with this witness so long as he maintains his present attitude.

"We have information that Rothstein on one item alone received $385,000 from Fuller in a gaming transaction which, under the statutes of New York, would be recoverable from him and would go to the creditors." Turning to Rothstein, Mr. Chadbourne said:

"I now demand of you the payment of the $385,000."

For the first time, Rothstein appeared surprised. "Do I understand you are asking me to give you $385,000?" he asked.

"You may take it under advisement," suggested Referee Coffin.

Rothstein was directed to appear for further examination on the afternoon of Oct. 8.

Ex-Supreme Court Justice Edward E. McCall, attorney for Stoneham, conferred for an hour yesterday with United States District Attorney William Hayward. Colonel Hayward also conferred with Fuller and William F. McGee. W. J. Fallon will be examined this afternoon by Referee Peter B. Olney Jr., in the bankruptcy of Dillon & Co., for which firm he was attorney.

Flint's Fine Furniture

THREE DESKS

In the struggle to keep correspondence cleared up, a well-chosen desk is half the battle. And even a reluctant pen may find a Flint & Horner desk that will inspire courage and industry. The prices asked are low indeed.

For the one good desk that every living-room needs, Colonial lines are an excellent choice. A simple model like this blends well with the rest of the furniture. Solid mahogany, 37" wide. $93.

This spinet desk is so quaint and delicate that it should certainly acquire a very feminine person for its owner. For solid mahogany, $32 is very little.

For a man's library, this solid-looking desk recommends itself. It is the Colonial scroll design, genuine mahogany, and its 36" width gives plenty of elbow room. $65.

Probably the lack of any soul or sense, of any truth in characterization or dramatic freshness, will not be generally felt in this exploitation of Casanova of the 300 mistresses. The producers have seen to that, enveloping an episode of eighteenth century gallantry in all that our stage commands of glamor—glamor of histrionic personality in an able company, headed by Lowell Sherman and Katharine Cornell, and glamor of rich fabrics and theatric brilliance presided over by Gilbert Miller.

The prologue, a ballet pantomine devised by Michel Fokine, was a thing of exquisite fancy, redolent of sensual love in carnival, rhythmic with aphrodisiac pain and longing. It was a fit prelude to a presentation of the historic Casanova, the Ambassador and wit, the Finance Minister and common rogue, who cast a spell of the flesh, a glamor of perilous romance, over so many of the frail and fair. Thereafter limitations developed. True, costumes and scenes retained their Old World quaintness, their rustle of thick satin and glamour of cloth-of-gold. Lowell Sherman was competently buoyant and erotic and Katherine Cornell suffused her scenes with the lure of feminine sensibility and courageous adventure. But there was no play, not really.

For this "arch-rogue," as the program calls him, was of the stage, stagey. One heard much of the three hundred, but saw only Miss Cornell. Genuine passion intruded, or what was meant as such, and presently dwindled into sentimentality, commonplace and overwrought. Did I say only Miss Cornell? It should be added that in the weeping last act she appeared as our heroine's daughter, Casanova's illegitimate child. The spent libertine melted to paternal dotage and died on the carpet, kissing the spot where her young foot had trod.

How far the spell of the production will carry, and the dashing spirits of Miss Cornell's performance, can only be vaguely guessed. Those who are out for the lure of undraped sex and the amorous versatilities of fancy will be disappointed. How seriously the juvenile sentimentalitists will be moved, and the flappers of self-expression, remains to be seen. Last night's audience, as it seemed, was in the main interested and was filled with admiration for the theatric expertness of the production and its surface glamour.

PAYING 'PHILOPOENA' DEBTS

Marie Dressler Deposits $5,000 With Creditors in London.

Copyright, 1923, by The New York Times Company.
By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—Marie Dressler has deposited with the Creditors' Association one thousand pounds to meet debts, including claims for unpaid salaries, incurred through the failure of "Philopoena" here in 1908.

She has also undertaken to provide more money if necessary to settle all claims the committee of the Actors' Association will credit there.

In September, 1909, Miss Dressler filed a petition in bankruptcy in this county, listing liabilities of $24,886. There were fifty-nine creditors and the debts, except $4,000 to a Paris creditor, were contracted as a result of a London theatrical venture. Some of the creditors named at that time were John C. Lubbock, $1,000, secured by a mortgage on furniture; Gustav Beer, $5,388 for costumes; James Smart, $814, costumes; Clarkson, $925, costumes and wigs; James Milton & Co., loan, $3,750.

Miss Dressler was said to have paid several of her company by disposing of her jewels.

CHAPLIN TO QUIT SLAPSTICK

His Comedy Acting of Future to Be Whimsical Humor.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—Charlie Chaplin has retired temporarily from custard comedies and is resting, he said today when in Chicago en route to New York to view a picture story which he wrote and directed, but in which he does not act.

Chaplin says he hopes to do better things for the screen, and will return to comedy acting, but it will be whimsical humor rather than the slapstick variety.

"Only in the movies do the actors 'register' emotions with strange facial distortions," he said.

So in the new Chaplin order of things the characters live the plot, "but do not make the fatal mistake, which ruins the average movie of today, of showing their emotion by distorted facial expression," he said, adding: "They do not 'register'; they act. They do what they can to remedy their situation. They struggle. That is drama."

Japan's Earthquake in Movies.

A two-reel motion picture of the scenes following the earthquake and fire in Yokohama and Tokio, was received here yesterday by the Famous Players Corporation and put on the screen at the Rialto and Rivoli theatres last night. They reached Victoria, B. C., on the Empress of Australia last Sunday and were brought by seaplane to Seattle and aeroplane to New York by way of Great Falls, Montana. The machine reached Mineola at 3:15 P. M.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

The recent alternation of limited forward and backward movements on the Stock Exchange have not been enlightening, even in regard to financial sentiment; but yesterday's market at least suggested that anything in the way of concrete news, good or bad, is likely to have prompt effect. This time it was the unexpected resumption of dividends on Baltimore & Ohio's common stock. Paying 6 per cent. before the war and 5 per cent. then until 1919, payments were suspended in order to lighten the load of borrowing. Yesterday afternoon, return to the 5 per cent. annual payment was announced, and the stock market rose immediately. With the company's net earnings more than 50 per cent. over 1922 for the year to date, the decision should not have been a complete surprise. But it probably served to remind Wall Street that the railways as a whole have this year increased their net receipts by 25 to 30 per cent., and that the achievement has very tangible significance in company finance.

Possibly the stock market would have recovered even without this particular stimulus; for Tuesday was a day of professional speculation for the decline, and the market has now grown accustomed to quick reversals. As it was, some of the late recoveries were rapid enough to more than cancel the previous day's declines. Several railway shares rose a point or more, Baltimore & Ohio itself 4⅛, and advances of a point were numerous among the industrial shares also. After the close of business another statement bearing on railway income was given out. Car loadings for the second week of September crossed the million mark for the thirteenth time this year.

The German Government's formal proclamation of termination of resistance in the Ruhr was followed by slight downward reaction in foreign exchange rates, doubtless occasioned by what speculative Wall Street calls "selling when the news is out." The idea had some prevalence that the German people's submissive reception of the capitulation might have caused enthusiasm, when there had been so much talk of a "Communist revolution" on the surrender. But nobody seriously expected that. The German people are first of all sick of depreciated paper money—which is the recognized badge of European communism.

The difficulty of measuring the actual state of trade, which at present seems to beset every branch of business, is rather strikingly reflected in the mid-week reviews of the steel industry. On Tuesday afternoon a statement was given out that in three weeks of September the Steel Corporation had taken orders averaging 31,931 tons daily, as against 15,268 in the same weeks of August. Yet The Iron Age's summary is that, for the trade at large, "September so far is no better than August." The consumer, having no fear about getting delivery against orders placed later on, "finds a waiting policy wholly to his advantage"; the producer believes that purchases will have to be made in the next few weeks, large enough to maintain existing prices. One hears much the same report from other trades.

From one point of view, this is a curious sequel to last February's warnings of "runaway prices" and an "inflation market" in the Autumn; but from another it is a natural sequel to the abnormally large forward orders placed in the active markets of the Spring months. Even in the steel trade, however, it is highly interesting to observe that current reports do not tell us of diminishing consumption. If this is a period of reaction, it is certainly not the reaction of the Autumn of 1920.

MONEY.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 26, 1923.

Stock Exchange call money continued firm, opening and renewing at 5¼ per cent., a slight advance from Tuesday's final; rate later moved up to 5½, where it ruled until close. Market for fixed period funds was quiet, there being little demand for new money; dealers placed four to six months' accommodation at 5⅝, an advance of ⅛, but near dates were quoted unchanged at 5½.

B. & O. RESUMES 5% ON COMMON STOCK

Unexpected Announcement Jumps Shares 4⅜ Points in Last-Minute Trading.

With its net operating income increased this year by more than $22,000,000 the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad has resumed dividends on the common stock at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum. The dividend announcement yesterday, which was a surprise to Wall Street, was the first to be made by the Baltimore & Ohio for four years, and it has been six years since the rate on the common was 5 per cent. The regular quarterly 1 per cent. on the preferred also was declared.

President Daniel Willard declared his belief that Baltimore & Ohio "had come back for good as a dividend payer." Nevertheless, up to the very hour of meeting in the First National Bank Building here yesterday afternoon, the directors differed widely, both as to whether or not a dividend should be paid at this time, and if so what amount.

Announcement of the dividend was made at 2:46 P. M., and in the fourteen minutes until the close of the Stock Exchange practically all trading centred in Baltimore & Ohio issues at post number 12. Professional bears sought frantically to rebuy the shares they had sold for a decline, and in the last few minutes more than 51,000 shares of the common stock changed hands at from 50½ to 54⅞ per share. At the same time much excitement prevailed in the bond crowd by advance in the Baltimore & Ohio convertible 4½ per cent. bonds which rose quickly from 81½ to 84. The same strength [illegible] reflected in the gold 4s, the refun[illegible]s and the 6 per cent. bonds.

After the meeting President Willard said that the physical condition of the road had been brought up to a higher standard than has prevailed in the last ten years. He said that "unless an extraordinary unfavorable and unexpected situation arose affecting the entire country or the entire railroad situation, the Baltimore & Ohio has come back for good as a dividend payer." The last dividend paid by the road was 4 per cent. in 1919, half of which was to pay the dividend omitted in 1918. The common shares now go back to their 1917 status.

The financial statement for the first nine months of the year, with September estimated, put the net operating income for this period at $34,755,742, an increase of $22,264,522 over the same period last year. The board estimates that it will have an available income for the first three-quarters of the year, after all charges, of $12,091,954.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Strong Rally in Late Trading.

Following dull and uninteresting movements during the first four hours of trading yesterday, the stock market suddenly took on new life in the closing hour and some substantial gains were reported as compared with the closing prices of Tuesday. The feature in the last fifteen minutes of trading was Baltimore & Ohio, which ended the day with a net gain of 4⅛ points, following announcement of resumption of dividend payments. This advance stimulated the demand for other low-priced railroad stocks, including Southern Railway, Wabash preferred A, Western Pacific preferred, and numerous non-dividend paying issues. Long before the wild scramble in Baltimore & Ohio, however, the market had been hardening under leadership of Baldwin, American Can, Studebaker and Steel common. The strength in these leading shares resulted in better prices in other sections of the industrial list. But trading on the whole was small in comparison with Tuesday and confined mainly to professional operations, although new buying was reported in the railways. Higher prices in the stock market were accompanied by a further rise in grain prices and renewal of the upward movement in cotton.

The Stock Market and the Ruhr.

It has been quite evident to even the most casual observer this week that the immediate reaction to developments in the Ruhr Valley on the American markets is not nearly so pronounced as on the London and Paris markets. Distance is admitted to have something to do with this, as well as the fact that Great Britain and France are more closely related to the international crisis than is the United States, but it is agreed that our market seems to have paid no attention whatever to the momentous decision of the Germans to cease the policy of passive resistance. Many international bankers have expressed the belief that this move, political or strategic as it may be, is the first sign of the approach of international peace. Some of them said yesterday that they are unable to understand why our markets do not pay more attention at the moment to foreign news than they do. The only explanation suggested was the fact that domestic news outweighs foreign news on the stock market.

The B. & O. Dividend.

Life returned to a dull market within fifteen minutes of closing time yesterday on the news that dividends had been resumed on the Baltimore & Ohio common. Rumors of a dividend had been going the rounds for days. Despite these reports, however, there were enough "doubters" left in the financial district to cause wild excitement on the Stock Exchange when the news became public. More than one-third of the members on the floor crowded around the Baltimore & Ohio post and exchanged approximately 51,000 shares in the brief interval that remained before the closing bell. At the same time the price advanced from 50½ to 54⅞, with the market still in a state of excitement at the close.

Banks Liquidating Securities.

The statements of condition which are now being issued by the national banks in answer to the latest call of the Controller of the Currency are being scrutinized by Wall Street interests for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not the banks have been liquidating their security holdings during the last few months. In most instances comparison of the statements with those issued at the close of June show that banks have been selling securities, and, based upon the statements already in hand, it was estimated yesterday that the large institutions have liquidated upward of $200,000,000, most of the selling being in Government securities. In connection with this selling, the statements invariably show an increase in cash holdings compared with the previous reports. While much of the selling has been for the account of local banks, a very substantial part of it comes from the West.

Events Still to Be Discounted.

Conservative brokers yesterday expressed the opinion that there are numerous events which have come to pass or which are still impending that are still to be discounted, from the stock market's point of view. It was pointed out that the market paid virtually no attention to the recognition of Mexico by the United States, which is expected to result in trade expansion between the two countries sooner or later. Little attention has been paid to the abandonment of passive resistance in the Ruhr by Germany. There are also, it was suggested, the increased orders expected from Japan as soon as the necessary financing has been arranged. That these and other factors must in some way be reflected in the stock market in the not distant future was the prediction. Yet in face of these developments brokers are complaining that they are getting very few orders from the public to buy stocks. The remark was also made, however, that brokers ought not to expect much new business of the sort when they advise customers that lower prices are expected up to Dec. 1, when the annual selling to establish losses in connection with tax returns will be out of the way.

Beginning March 22, the Stock Exchange officially quotes Liberty bonds in units and fractions, the fractions being 32ds of a unit, and the quotations after the decimal point representing one or more 32ds. In the above table, therefore, the figures of highest and lowest prices during 1923 and since date of issue are reduced to the form now used in the Stock Exchange quotations.

Assessed value for purpose of taxation 1922. $232,851,469
Total Bonded Debt $47,203,850
Bonds self-supporting and Sinking Fund 34,307,175
Net Bonded Debt 12,896,675
Population 1920 (U. S. Census) 315,652

In the opinion of counsel, these bonds are an obligation of the City of Seattle, and together with bonds previously issued are payable, both principal and interest, from the Gross Revenues of the entire Municipal Light and Power Plant and System now or hereafter owned. These revenues for the five-year period from 1918 to 1922 averaged $2,261,087 annually, equal to about three times the present annual interest requirements. The Gross Revenues for 1922 were $2,551,193, equivalent to over three and one-quarter times the present annual interest requirements. These earnings should increase materially upon completion of the new 40,000 KW Hydro-Electric Unit, power from which, it is estimated, will be delivered in Seattle by January 1, 1924.

Conservatism and Income

The marked characteristic of the House of Hodson has been to find new investment opportunities and to develop them into sound securities which combine most conservative elements, and yet yield a liberal interest rate. How we accomplish this is explained in our Booklet T-214

"Maximum Returns Compatible with the Utmost Security"—
The Commonwealth Pledge

WE are now offering an issue of First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds (in denominations of $100, $500 and $1000), which pays 6½% interest and which, in the opinion of competent counsel, is legal for the investment of trust funds in New York State, the laws of which are particularly rigid.

This Commonwealth Bond issue is only 53% of the conservatively estimated value of the property securing it (improved real estate of a very high character), the estimated income of which is three times the amount of the greatest possible annual interest charges. Maturities are from 1 to 15 years. The payment of interest, amortization and taxes is guaranteed by a very strong corporation with a record of 50 years for fulfilling its obligations.

This issue fulfills the Commonwealth Pledge to the investor. It offers a rare opportunity to put your money to work for as long or as short a time as you wish at a high return and under conditions so safe that you may simply forget it until it comes due.

The attractiveness of these bonds is characteristic of all Commonwealth First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds. It is a result of the Commonwealth method of protecting the interests of the investor—a method that employs every safeguard known to the executives and Directors of the Commonwealth Bond Corporation—each of whom is a recognized leader in the field of mortgage banking, architecture, real estate or building construction.

COTTON PRICES RISE ON SHORT COVERING

Following two days' loss in prices, cotton turned sharply and recovered nearly three-quarters of a cent yesterday. Fears of a storm in the cotton belt, with uncertainty over the regular monthly report next week, brought active covering the moment resistance appeared. But aside from news features, larger trade purchases as distant months worked off to a basis of 27½ cents furnished an increased buying power. An aggressive buying movement ran December above 28½ cents at one time, but reports of free selling of actual cotton in the Southwest had an unsettling effect near the close. Final prices showed a gain of 17 to 36 points. For the first time in the history of the Exchange the certificated stock fell below 1,000 bales.

Yesterday's quotations follow:

Ready to Float Japanese Loan.

C. E. Mitchell, President of the National City Company, stated yesterday that his company had placed itself at the service of the Japanese Government in case it desired to float a loan in this country. He said that while preliminary conversations had been held concerning such a loan, no action had been taken regarding an amount, a rate of interest or a term of years. The statements were made in answer to inquiries concerning a cable from Japan to the effect that the National City Company had closed negotiations with the Japanese Government for a $100,000,000 loan at 5½ per cent.

Car Loadings Near Record.

Car loadings in the week of Sept. 15 aggregated 1,060,580, according to a statement issued yesterday by the Car Service Division of the American Railway Association. Although anthracite mining was suspended, this was only 31,987 cars under the record established in the closing week of August. Compared with the same week last year there was an increase of 123,359 cars and compared with 1921, the gain amounted to 208,028 cars.

CORN HELPS WHEAT TO A NEW ADVANCE

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—Corn became the market leader today, all deliveries except December selling at new high figures for the season, and September getting up to 90⅛ cents and closing there.

Wheat derived the greater part of its strength from corn. The close was at the top, with net gains of 1@1¾ cents.

Export demand was slow throughout the day, with sales estimated at 300,000 bushels at the seaboard.

Russia was said to have sold six cargoes to Continental countries yesterday, and private cables claimed the Russian export department had chartered thirty-five steamers to load Black Sea grain between now and the middle of November and continues to charter freely.

Today's Chicago prices for the principal commodities were as follows:

Halls Outlook for Railroads.

Julius Kruttschnitt, Chairman of the board of the Southern Pacific system, who has returned from a trip of inspection through the West, said yesterday that railroad traffic this year had far exceeded his expectations and that business would undoubtedly continue good for the remainder of the year and perhaps during 1924. The Southern Pacific contemplates extensive improvements for 1924, he said, including extra locomotives and equipment to handle increased traffic.

Price of Refined Sugar Goes Up.

Refined sugar sold from 8.90 to 9.15 cents a pound yesterday, the latter price being a new high for the present movement, and almost within a cent of the year's peak price last Spring. Rumors of a sale of raw sugar at 6 cents could not be confirmed, but this was the quotation for October raws.

LATEST DEALINGS IN REALTY FIELD

Investor Buys Co-operative Building in Seventh Av.—Five Bronx Houses in $310,000 Deal

The Lenape Realty Corporation sold the 100 per cent. co-operative tenant-ownership property at the southwest corner of Seventh Avenue and 129th Street to an investor. The property consists of three five-story apartments with stores and a three-story private dwelling, having a frontage of 100 feet on Seventh Avenue and 93 feet on 129th Street.

The brokers were Irving H. Wolfe in conjunction with Childs & Humphries.

Edmund A. S. Lee sold to a client the building on the northwest corner of 159th Street and Amsterdam Avenue, known as 507 West 159th Street. The property was held at $140,000. It has a rent roll of about $20,000. The same broker is now negotiating for a resale.

The five-story dwelling at 237 West 137th Street has been sold by Jerome H. Frank to Charles Taylor and E. O. Boddie, who will renovate for occupancy.

Marion E. P. Skerton sold to a client of Albert B. Ashforth for investment the four-story dwelling 11 East Ninety-second Street, between Fifth and Madison Avenues, size 25 by 100.

$410,000 Bronx Transaction.

The Basol Realty Corporation, represented by Leo Rosenberg, sold to the Clearing Realty Corporation, Isadore B. Geller, President, the five five-story brick buildings known as 708 to 724 Cauldwell Avenue. The buildings show a rental of over $50,000 annually and were held at $310,000.

Kalman Manas sold to a client of Leo Rosenberg 900 Fox Street, a five-story brick apartment house on the corner of Fox and Barretto Streets, on a plot 52 by 105, showing a rental of $16,000 annually and held at $100,000.

Bloch & Sinn sold to a client of Leo Rosenberg 719 East 176th Street, a five-story brick apartment house on a plot 55 by 100, held at $65,000 and showing an annual rental of $9,000.

Nachliel Realty Corporation sold to a client of Leo Rosenberg premises 707 and 709 East 181st Street, on a plot 67 by 80, on the corner of 181st Street and Corona Avenue, held at $70,000 and showing a rental of $10,500.

M. J. Levinson sold for the Manport Realty Corporation the new-law tax-exempt apartment house 2,083 Creston Avenue, near Burnside Avenue, a 5½-story building accommodating thirty-one families, with a rental of about $24,000 a year and held at $140,000.

Franklin Savings Bank Buys.

Another development in the Times Square district was disclosed yesterday when the officers of the Franklin Savings Bank, southeast corner of Eighth Avenue and Forty-second Street, announced that the bank had purchased 654 Eighth Avenue, being approximately 25 feet on Eighth Avenue and 55 feet in depth.

This purchase completes the corner plot of 100 feet by 100 feet which the bank has been gradually accumulating, and once more calls attention to the increasing activity of Eighth Avenue real estate in that section. The site will eventually be improved to meet the growing demands of the bank.

Suburban Buyers.

S. M. Marshall sold the private residence at 85 Palisade Avenue, Riverview Manor, Dobbs Ferry, to Major W. H. Bennet. Edgar G. Johnson was the broker. This property was held at $37,500.

Chauncey B. Griffen sold for Bertram H. Carmer, a large plot on Guion Street, Pleasantville, to C. R. Stockton. The plot adjoins the present holdings of Mr. Stockton.

Good Orders for Silk Gloves.

Substantial advance business in women's silk gloves for Spring has been placed here. Retail stocks are well cleaned out and this, coupled with the expectation that prices may go higher, has put unusual snap into early purchasing. Fancy strap wrist gauntlets are again in main preference, followed by long gloves. Only a small interest has been shown so far in the short styles.

Using More Fibre Silks.

Leading producers of knitted fibre silk fabrics find the current demand strong. An already notable interest has been spurred by the present silk situation. The cloths are used for formal and street wear outergarments and also for sports use. Those resembling chiffon velvet are especially favored. Wood browns, blues and grays are the leading shades for less formal garments, while the high colors rule for evening wear. Spring lines will be ready shortly.

Silk Shortage Helps Sales.

Manufacturers of silk underwear and negligees report that the threatened shortage of raw silk has done more to stimulate business than to hurt it. The call for the better-grade garments is especially strong, and in some instances more business in them has been done in the last two weeks than in any similar period in several years. The rise in prices has not been marked enough to cause any hesitation, although most manufacturers are pricing their garments at replacement values.

Prices Easier at Fur Sale.

Prices were generally easier at the third day's sessions of the fur sale in the Masonic Hall. The declines were attributed both to the apathy of buyers and the size of the collections offered. Southern muskrat, which dropped 25 per cent. from the Spring averages, was in greater supply than all of the muskrats together at the Fall sale last year. Good Northern muskrats, as well as blacks, showed no change from the Spring levels, but Canadians dropped 15 per cent. Marmot was 20 per cent. off Spring prices, and a decline of 10 per cent. was shown in squirrel. Total sales up to last night exceeded $1,500,000, with five days to go.

Some Hosiery Prices Higher.

Some price advances are reported on silk hosiery here, in line with higher raw silk, but most of the manufacturers are marking time. Old orders are being filled at former figures, but no substantial forward business is accepted. One prominent concern, however, is taking new orders at unchanged prices until raw silk stocks on hand are exhausted. Manufacturers are making no effort to cover silk requirements now, and will continue not to until the situation becomes clearer. Retail buyers are inclined to be conservative, but more interest is shown in ingrained hosiery in the wood shades. Chiffons in light colors are also receiving increased attention.

Gray Goods Showed Little Snap.

Gray goods trading again lacked snap in this market yesterday. Buyers gave evidence of being "fed up" for the time being, and appeared willing to wait for the forthcoming Federal report on cotton before seriously committing themselves any further. Fair buying of 38½-inch 64-60 printcloths was reported at 10⅛ cents, with similar trading in 38½-inch 60-48s at 9 cents. Some first hands sold 39-inch 68-72s at 11⅞ cents, but most of these sellers would not trade below 12 cents. Twelve cents was asked for 37-inch 48-square, four-yard sheetings, and some trading in that part of the market was done on that basis. Fine-yarn goods and specialties were quiet but firm.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Le Roy M. Le Vake, who has for many years been associated with the retail end of the trimmed hat business, is to join the Board of Directors of James G. Johnson & Co., wholesale milliners, 2 to 16 West Thirty-third Street, and take charge of the trimmed hat departments. He is now in charge of the millinery department of Saks & Co.

The Converters' Association will resume its general meetings here on Oct. 30, when several matters of trade importance will be discussed.
